Flavors of the Oregon Coast Come to the Valley!

Please join us this January to celebrate "Oregon Crab Month" with our 19th annual Mo's Crab & Chowder Festival. This yearly tradition brings the flavors of the Oregon Coast to the winery by offering Mo's world famous steaming chowder bowls, fresh Oregon Coast crab and other seafood selections perfectly paired with our acclaimed Pinot Gris. Buy a Case, Get a Crab!

We are featuring a "Friday Night Kick-Off Party" from 6-9 pm on January 29th. The fun will continue on January 30th & 31st from 11 am – 6 pm.

We will be transforming our winery crush pad to host the celebration with live rock & roll music by The Flextones and plenty of room for dancing.

Admission is $15 and includes wine tasting and live music (stemware not included). Admission for Wine Club Members, Shareholders and their guests is $10. Mo's menu items will be available for purchase at an additional cost. Please RSVP to 503-588-9463 for expedited entry the day of the event.

KEN WRIGHT CELLARS

Here's to Old Friends & Bright Futures.

On October 19th, 2015, Ken Wright Cellars acquired Carter Vineyard. Our valued and long-term relationship with Jack and Kathleen Carter began in 1990 – our first year of creating vineyard designated Pinot noir. For 25 years, we have cared for this site as if it were our own. Last year, Kathleen and Jack approached us about purchasing their vineyard. They could have put the property on the open market, but they cared more about our relationship and our efforts to promote what they had created and cultivated. Kathleen and Jack Carter epitomize what Oregon is all about. Relationships matter. Friendships matter.

Taste some of the Northwest's finest wines in one of the world's most beautiful places

Savor Cannon Beach offers four days of wine, culinary and arts events in one of the Pacific Northwest's most popular vacation destinations.

Wine tastings, culinary events, wine education programs and a community-wide wine walk make Savor Cannon Beach one of the Northwest's most unique wine and culinary festivals. Nine festival events focus on specific themes that showcase the bounty of Northwest wine and cuisine while restaurants, galleries and shops add a weekend full of tastings, special dinners and cultural events. Participants can taste wines from approximately 40 Northwest wineries during the Savor Cannon Beach wine walk as dozens of art galleries, restaurants and retail shops host wineries, all within easy walking distance.

Share and Tell

CONTINUING A LEGACY OF PROMOTING OREGON

The year 2015 was one of incredible highs, with the record-breaking early and plentiful harvest, and heartbreaking lows marked with the passing of Cole Danehower, one of the industry's greatest advocates and dearest friends.

It is still hard to believe that Cole is not a call or e-mail away, or that we won't be seeing him at the next major wine event. He was such a font of knowledge, a man of know-how and a person of the highest integrity. For those reasons and many more, OWP honors him as the 2015 OWP Person of the Year (see page 24).

Undoubtedly, friends and colleagues will mourn Cole for a long time, but I'd bet that's not what he'd want. I can hear him say, "There's no time for tears; there's too much work to do!"

Tireless were his efforts to promote Oregon wine. And to honor Cole, all of us industry members — and Oregon wine enthusiasts, too — need to take up his torch, so bright and powerful.

I am not talking about creating billboards or multi-million-dollar campaigns — although those would be much appreciated — instead, it's the little efforts that can have just as much impact. As an editor, Cole would agree, it's all in the details.

How about ordering a glass of state-made wine at your favorite restaurant or demanding more Oregon wines be made available on the menu? Cole would approve; he was integral in revitalizing the Oregon Wine A-List Awards ( formerly Superior Cellar Awards) with OWP and the Oregon Wine Board in 2015. (For a list of 2016 winners, see page 46.)

If you would rather eat at home, perhaps gather friends and family for a wine dinner preceded by an informal Oregon wine tasting, a "share-and-tell," so to speak. Although intimidating at first, wine descriptors can be a lot of fun — and even more so as the bottles empty. Any chance to discuss and experience Oregon wine is always good for "the cause."

How about sharing a copy of OWP? You could take the latest edition on your travels, leaving it on the plane so unsuspecting wine lovers can pore over the pages, and maybe even pass it on.

No matter how big or small, every bit helps spread the word about Oregon wine. And with every effort made, and bottle shared, Cole's spirit lives on.

VINTAGE DELIVERS EXCEPTIONAL FRUIT QUALITY

REPORT BY OREGON WINE BOARD

Once again, the Oregon wine industry experienced another extraordinary, nearly ideal growing season. The 2015 vintage began with warm weather conditions in the winter that continued through spring and summer. Yet, light scattered showers in late August and a return to normalcy in September gave a break to what was an intense growing season. The result was concentrated, balanced fruit throughout the state.

The 2015 vintage started with bud break in March, two to three weeks early depending on the region and vineyard site. The early trend continued with higher than normal temperatures through spring, which created exceptional conditions for bloom, flower and fruit set. As spring gave way to summer, conditions continued to be warmer than usual and, consequently, grape clusters were far larger than typical. Most growers chose to slow ripening by leaving extra fruit on the vine. As September gave way to standard weather patterns, the decision to hang extra fruit allowed it to mature more gradually and develop extraordinary flavors that harmoniously balanced against acids.

Throughout the state, harvest started around Aug. 26, making 2015 one of the earliest harvests on record. The growing conditions from bud break through harvest paved the way for virtually pristine fruit with minimal signs of disease and no fear of pest or bird effects. Some sites, however, did experience sunburnt grapes. Wineries in the Willamette Valley were finished with harvest by the end of September to early-October, while wineries in other regions carried on through mid-October based on late-ripening varieties. Most wineries reported higher-than-normal yields resulting from decisions made in the vineyard and larger-than-normal clusters. However, a deep freeze in November 2014 impacted some regions and sites, resulting in some bud and vine damage and, therefore, a smaller crop.

Columbia Gorge

The 2015 season was early, hot and dry. "Early" at bud break became even earlier as the growing season progressed. Yet in spite of the unbelievable growing weather spring through harvest, the biggest challenge in the Columbia Gorge and Valley was the killing cold we experienced in November 2014. On plants that survived to harvest, all components of yield were affected: bunch count, berry number and berry size were reduced in many varieties and at most sites. On the crush pad fruit was unapologetically delicious. Harvest began on Aug. 26 and the latest variety on the latest site was brought in on Oct. 9, though everything else — of the twenty-some varieties we grow — was in by Sept. 26.

▲ Harvest at Celilo Vineyard in the Gorge.

Weather this vintage was extreme. The warm spring created a very early season that we sensed was three to four weeks earlier than normal. In the end, at harvest it turned out to be only one week early for some varietals (late ones) and three weeks early for others (early ones). But, the effect of last fall's freeze caused some bud death and wood damage. Any vineyard that was affected by this freeze, including ours, most likely experienced reduced yields if they had any crop at all. That said, we are very pleased with this year's quality. Fortunately, everything concentrated including the acids so the chemistries remained conducive for making great wines.

Southern Oregon

It was nothing short of a spectacular year down here in the Umpqua Valley. A warm and dry winter led to very early bud break and almost ideal conditions through bloom. It basically stayed warm and very dry throughout the entire season, resulting in anywhere from three to four weeks ahead of normal the whole time. The result was excellent grapes, perhaps the best I have seen top to bottom.

PAT SPANGLER
SPANGLER VINEYARDS

In these last two warmer years, the harvest window has gotten shorter and more intense. In 2015, we started on Sept. 8 with Gamay from the Roseburg area and ended on Oct. 6 with Tempranillo from Abacela. Up until 2012, we hardly ever saw any fruit in until Oct. 1. Fruit was very clean overall. Quality looks very good. Despite the warmer year, perhaps because of the higher crops and cooler September nights, sugars have not been over the top.

TERRY BRANDBORG

Eastern Oregon

This was an extremely hot, dry year with many new records set in the Columbia Basin, and the Walla Walla Valley was no exception. Early spring was very warm, moving bud break up a couple of weeks over average. Mid-spring temperatures moderated slightly, but not enough to slow down growth. From early summer on through harvest, temperatures were above normal. Harvest started for us with early whites coming in the last week of August, followed by Merlot the first week of September, about 10 days ahead of an early normal vintage. There was some loss in the Walla Walla Valley at low elevations from last November's severe cold event. Mid- to high-elevation sites experienced little loss of crop level. At Seven Hills, we crushed our last fruit on Oct. 19. I expect the vintage to be concentrated and accentuating ripe fruit characters. I see strong color and tannin, which will form the basis of aging well in these wines. Acids are softer, leading to a plush palate.

Willamette Valley

All in all, this has been one of those all too rare vintages resulting in high yields and exceptional quality. We knew it would be a different kind of year when we had bud break in March and bloom by the end of May, a full three-and-a-half weeks ahead of the norm. When we did our vineyard survey and crop forecasting, we were shocked at the size of the clusters at that stage of growth. We had near perfect weather for the balance of the season, and we were able to hang the fruit until it was as close to perfect as possible. Overall, the quality has been very good to excellent, with plenty of sugar and enough acid to balance it and, thankfully, lower-than-average pH levels.

"We see the same color, beautiful fruit, concentration and suppleness as we saw in 2014. Whites again look fully ripe, texturally rich and yet balanced. We just had twins, one year apart!"

HARRY PETERSON-NEDRY, CHEHALEM WINES

To sum it up — a very early, hot growing season but a thankfully cooler final ripening. We had pristinely clean fruit, bountiful yields, moderate to high alcohols, lower acids and no rain — a twin to 2014 in many ways. Despite being slightly different from 2014 in early growing season timing, the final effect was the same with big heat, big crop and big expectations. We see the same color, beautiful fruit, concentration and suppleness as we saw in 2014. Whites again look fully ripe, texturally rich and yet balanced. We just had twins, one year apart!

HARRY PETERSON-NEDRY

The 2015 vintage was another vintage of high yields and high quality, the second in a row. When I came to Oregon in 2001, two to two-and-a-half tons per acre in the Willamette Valley was the rule. Now, we are seeing yields of three to four tons per acre. We started harvest on Sept. 8, the earliest in our 36 years, and finished on Oct. 20. Overall, the 2015 vintage is another great vintage all across Oregon. Red wines are very dark and concentrated, far away from what was typical when I came for the first time to Oregon.

THE EYRIE VINEYARDS HONORS 50 YEARS

BY MICHAEL ALBERTY

On Feb. 22, 2015, an historic wine event took place at the Portland Art Museum as 250 people from around the world gathered to toast the late David Lett, his family and their five decades of winemaking at The Eyrie Vineyards.

When David planted those first Pinot Noir cuttings in a nursery near Corvallis on Feb. 22, 1965, I wonder if he thought one day his wines would be served to friends, family and members of the international wine community in a museum ballroom?

David's wife, Diana Lett, must have known I wasn't the only person in attendance with that question on my mind as she remarked in her welcoming address "we could barely afford to think from day-to-day back then, much less 50 years into the future." Diana then offered up my favorite line of the day: "In the 1960s being a winemaker was about as valid an occupation as being a shepherd."

By now, guests had settled into their seats and current winemaker Jason Lett, David and Diana's son, gave the crowd a detailed look at the 50-year history of his family's winery.

From describing how his father abandoned plans to attend dental school because of a chance stop at Chateau Souverain — thankfully deciding to go to U.C. Davis' winemaking program instead — to laying out the plans for Eyrie's new winery, Jason shared family photographs and pages from his father's private letters and wine journals. One photograph showed a young Diana standing in the new vineyard wearing a bright yellow rain suit; her whimsical "what could go wrong?" smile hinted at the carefree early days in the valley — I was happy to learn that iconic rain suit may still exist.

Jason continued by describing how his father concluded his studies at U.C. Davis with a thesis on where, outside Burgundy, Pinot Noir vines could grow successfully. He found spots in Portugal and New Zealand that would work, but the Willamette Valley looked to be the best candidate. As Jason described it, "armed with 3,000 cuttings and a theory" David Lett moved to Oregon to find the perfect vineyard location.

PHOTO PROVIDED

When David moved to Oregon, he took a job with a textbook company and while driving around making sales calls, he looked for possible vineyard sites. David knew from studying an old 19th century text written by French ampelographer Victor Pulliat how it was essential to match grape vines with appropriate climate. David's research on rainfall and degree days showed the Willamette Valley had the perfect climate for Pinot Noir. Now, he just had to find a hillside with southern exposure and the type of depleted soils that would force the roots to grow deep. By 1966, the Letts found the perfect spot, an abandoned prune orchard in the Red Hills of Dundee.

As they planted their vines, they became aware of neighbors spying on their activities: a pair of red-tailed hawks who had a nest in a nearby tree. The birds, according to Jason, not only became the winery's "totem animals," his mother decided the winery needed to be named in honor of their nest.

As they planted their vines, they became aware of neighbors spying on their activities: a pair of red-tailed hawks who had a nest in a nearby tree. The birds, according to Jason, not only became the winery's "totem animals," his mother decided the winery needed to be named in honor of their nest. Jason described it as a piece of "anti-marketing," pointing out that his mom, the English major, didn't consider the need for people to know the meaning, spelling or pronunciation of the name of your product. A half-century later, the name and label are Oregon icons. Honoring the vineyard's earliest visitors, proceeds from the anniversary celebration were donated to the Cascades Raptor Center in Eugene.

After Jason's presentation, attendees were treated to a tasting of four library wines from each of the winery's five decades, ranging from a 1977 Estate Pinot Gris to the last wine David Lett made before passing away in 2008: the 2007 South Block Reserve Pinot Noir. The Pinots were magnificent, and many were equally impressed by how gracefully Eyrie's white wines had aged. Everything was noteworthy, but my personal favorites were the 2002 Estate Chardonnay and the 2007 South Block Reserve Pinot Noir.

The wines' pristine condition is the result of a 21-step certification process created by Jason. Before any library wine

Rock-Solid AVA

OREGON'S NEWEST WINE REGION APPROVED

BY OWP STAFF

The Alcohol and Tobacco Tax and Trade Bureau (TTB) established The Rocks District of Milton-Freewater as the newest American Viticultural Area (AVA) on Feb. 9.

The AVA sits on an alluvial fan of the Walla Walla River, where the river exits the foothills of the Blue Mountains and enters the Walla Walla Valley. Located entirely within the state of Oregon, it includes part of the town of Milton-Freewater. The area contained within the Rocks District is within the Walla Walla Valley AVA, which, in turn, is entirely inside the larger Columbia Valley AVA.

The distinguishing feature of The Rocks District of Milton-Freewater is its soil, which consists primarily of well-drained dark-colored basalt cobblestones, which encourages the vines to root deeply. Due to their coarse texture, the soils are not easily eroded, requiring no cover crops, and the cobblestones can be left exposed where they absorb solar radiation. Heat from the sun-warmed stones promotes growth early in the season and assists ripening during the late summer and early fall.

Nineteen wine producers own vineyards within the boundaries of The Rocks District of Milton-Freewater AVA, which contains approximately 3,770 acres and currently has approximately 250 acres of commercially producing vineyards. The AVA application effort was organized and managed by Steve Robertson of Delmas/SJR Vineyard along with seven other winegrowers and producers. Dr. Kevin R. Pogue, professor of geology at Whitman College in Walla Walla, submitted the petition to the TTB.

Dr. Pogue is pleased the growers shared his idea that the AVA be highly uniform with regard to the physical environment.

"The concept behind AVAs is to recognize regions that have truly unique growing conditions that are expressed in the wines. I believe we have remained true to that spirit, creating an AVA with the most uniform terroir in the United States," he said. "The Rocks District lies on one landform, with very uniform topography and climate, and 96-percent of the soils belong to the Freewater soil series."

The Walla Walla Valley AVA as a whole spans northeastern Oregon to southeastern Washington and has a lengthy agricultural history. Numerous crops have been cultivated in The Rocks District since the late 1800s. In addition to winegrapes, the area still produces commercially grown apples, cherries, prunes and plums. Wines produced from vineyards planted in The Rocks District in the mid-1990s were recognized immediately by wine critics as among the finest in the country.

"Wines from The Rocks District of Milton-Freewater have been earning accolades for years," said Duane Wollmuth, executive director of the Walla Walla Valley Wine Alliance. "The Walla Walla Valley has a proud tradition of growing world-class winegrapes, and this designation will help winegrowers better tell the story of the unique terroir on which their grapes are grown."

"The Rocks District lies on one landform, with very uniform topography and climate, and 96-percent of the soils belong to the Freewater soil series."

"The Rocks District of Milton-Freewater marks Oregon's 18th AVA, another important step in designating the distinctive and high-quality winegrowing regions within our state," said Ellen Brittan, chairwoman of the Oregon Wine Board. "By gaining AVA status, producers who grow or source fruit from these vineyards can better differentiate the unique characteristics of their wines."

"Washington State Wine is excited to collaborate with our partners in the Walla Walla Valley AVA and in Oregon to share the story of The Rocks District of Milton-Freewater," said Steve Warner,

See THE ROCKS on page 64

ABOVE: Cayuse Vineyard. Much like the pudding or "galet roulés" of the Châteauneuf-du-Pape, formed by retreating glaciers and rounded by river tumbling, these stones retain heat from the daytime sun and slowly release it at night, creating a quicker ripening environment. An added bonus: the stones also act as a protective layer retaining moisture in the soil during the dry summer months.

Archiving Oregon

LINFIELD CAPTURES STORY OF WINE INDUSTRY

BY RACHAEL WOODY & RICH SCHMIDT

When Linfield College founded the Oregon Wine History Archive (OWHA) in 2011, the scope of the project was unspecified. Linfield — in McMinnville, the heart of the Willamette Valley wine region — had forged connections with some of the area's wine pioneers, and their collections were the catalyst to begin the archive.

In order to include the complete narrative of Oregon wine, the OWHA staff quickly realized they needed to venture beyond the Willamette Valley and seek collections and stories from the state's grape-growing regions in the Umpqua, Rogue and Columbia valleys. OWHA staff worked with the Oregon Wine Board for what became a multi-year project traveling the state's wine regions, meeting with people in the local wine industry, filming interviews and securing documents, photographs and artifacts to augment the Oregon wine story.

Umpqua Valley was the first region visited, and on the last day the staff squeezed in three interviews with area winemakers, one of whom was with John Bradley, the late owner of Bradley Vineyards. Bradley passed away not long after the OWHA interview, and the sudden loss of this Elkton-area pioneer emphasized the importance of capturing these winemakers' stories.

Bradley's interview encapsulates a number of themes in interviews across the regions, including area identity, how winemakers entered the industry and where they see it evolving. Bradley Vineyards is located in the Elkton AVA.

As Bradley explained, "Elkton is at the north end of the Umpqua Valley. We are the cooler part of the Umpqua Valley. We are unique unto ourselves, because we have this little coastal influence — this little gorge that runs out to the coast. I think that it's great we get some recognition for that … We're deserving of our own moment here, I think."

As with many Oregon wine pioneers, Bradley entered grapegrowing from a completely different field: construction. While many, Bradley included, didn't start with immediate wine industry knowledge, they all shared in the confidence that growing wine grapes in Oregon would work.

"It's like the whole industry of so many people came from so many different walks of life … It's all a bunch of independent people and it's like they knew they were right — what they were doing … You get up north [Willamette Valley] and you get the same thing. All the people, all the early-year people up there that are all very independent people from all walks of life, from all over the country come to

Burgundy Bound

Ken and Grace Evenstad, founders of Oregon's Domaine Serene, have purchased Château de la Crée, a Burgundy wine estate featuring vineyard property spanning seven appellations in Côte d'Or: Pommard, Volnay, Meursault, Puligny-Montrachet, Chassagne-Montrachet, Santenay and Maranges. The vineyards are planted both to Pinot Noir and Chardonnay; several are designated Premier Cru; two are unique Monopoles.

The property is a fortuitous discovery for the Evenstads. The Château de la Crée estate includes a unique collection of preeminent vineyard sites, a state-of-the-art gravity-flow winery and a historic restored château in Santenay, a charming village nestled against the mountain and facing south.

Dating from the 15th century, the Château was originally owned by Nicolas Rolin, Chancellor of the Duke of Burgundy Philippe le Bon, and founder of the renowned Hospice de Beaune. Rolin established a tradition of charitable donation through wine — one that the Evenstads regard as a fundamental founding principle at Domaine Serene.

In addition to the collection of impressive vineyard assets, the Evenstads are becoming acquainted with the winery staff in France. The unique synergies between Château de la Crée and Domaine Serene include wines produced with minimal intervention winemaking to ensure the expression of terroir.

There is also a common focus on sustainability among the estates. Château de la Crée uses no pesticides or herbicides in the vineyards and incorporates organic and Biodynamic farming practices. At Domaine Serene, a comprehensive program of sustainable farming methods has been followed since its founding in 1989 — all of its 240 acres of estate vineyards in the Willamette Valley are dry farmed and LIVE (Low Impact Viticulture and Enology) certified.

Aline Beauné, the winemaker at Château de la Crée, will work collaboratively with Domaine Serene Winemaker Erik Kramer. Longtime viticulturist Nicolas Perrault will continue to oversee all the vines and estates.

The Evenstads will be highly immersed in their Burgundy project, with more than 25 years of luxury wine branding, viticulture and winemaking expertise. They plan to introduce the Château de la Crée brand to new markets, including an expanded presence in the U.S.

There are future plans in discussion to create a prestige label offering a curated collection of the Evenstads' most prized bottlings.

Set on Spain

Paul O' Brien Winery has announced a partnership with Abadía de Acón Winery of Burgos, Spain, to produce a proprietary wine in the Ribera del Duero region, the first venture of its type in the U.S.

Beginning with the 2013 vintage, a wine based on Tempranillo (Tinto Fino) will be produced in conjunction with Abadía de Acón in Ribera del Duero and sourced from Acón's 100 acres of estate vineyards with vines up to 70 years of age — even older is Abadía de Acón's original cellar: hewn from rocky clay, it is one of the deepest and largest in Castrillo de la Vega and has been in use for many centuries.

Today, the Carrasco family utilizes their modern, state-of-the-art winery, where third-generation Jose Antonio Carrasco takes care of the wines and surrounding vineyards. The exclusive wine will be produced and bottled here, then shipped for exclusive sale in the U.S. In addition, Paul O'Brien winery will be the exclusive importer of Abadía de Acón's wines in Oregon.

"Ribera del Duero is the premier area for Tempranillo in Spain" said Dyson DeMara, co-founder of Paul O'Brien Winery with partner Scott Kelley. "We are excited to be working with Abadía de Acón to produce this first-of-its-kind wine."

"This is a further evolution of the sister city relationship between Roseburg and Aranda del Duero" added Kelley. "Producing Tempranillo in the Umpqua Valley and in Ribera del Duero will further highlight the greatness of this classic variety."

Long Live Maddi

COLLABORATION IN MEMORY OF DAUGHTER

BY OWP STAFF

On June 8, 2014, Carrie Higgins, owner of Crush Creative Packaging in Lake Oswego, received devastating news: Her teenage daughter, Madison "Maddi" Higgins, was in a serious car accident with her friend, Hayden Soyk, age 18. He was taken off life support the same day; Maddi, age 17, died the following day.

Maddi Higgins

Besides being a loving daughter and sister, and friend to many, Maddi was an all-state softball outfielder who dreamed of playing in college. In her honor, the Long Live Maddi Memorial Scholarship Fund was established, awarding college-bound softball players in West Linn, where she attended high school. Made possible by generous donations from friends, businesses and community members, $25,000 in college scholarships was presented on May 28.

A treasured member of the industry — Crush provides wine label and packaging services — Carrie has cultivated lasting friendships in the wine community. With the news of her daughter's death, winery friends immediately rallied around her in support and in raising money for Maddi's memorial fund.

Anne Hubatch of Helioterra Wines and Leah Jorgensen of Leah Jørgensen Cellars took the lead and gathered donations from other industry professionals. They also each donated a barrel of wine to make a very special blend, Angel in the Outfield #5, in honor of Maddi and her jersey number.

The red blend consists of Washington-grown Cabernet Sauvignon from Hubatch and Southern Oregon Cabernet Franc from Jorgensen. Others also donating time and material include: Tom Schaad of August Cellars, who managed bottling; Andrea LaRue of Nectar Graphics, who designed the label; Crush Creative Packaging and Taylor Made Labels for label printing; Pioneer Packaging for bottles; and Portocork America for corks.

During the bottling and labeling of the wine this June 5 at August Cellars in Newberg, Carrie was present and emotional. Four days before, the graduation of West Linn High School seniors was yet another reminder of Maddi's absence.

"While there won't be any festivities to look forward to this week celebrating Maddi's scholastic achievements or future college plans, we find solace and strength in continuing to honor Maddi's life and hope to keep her legacy alive by helping to save and better the lives of others through our outreach and scholarships," Carrie says.

The wine was released on June 9, marking the one-year anniversary of Maddi's death. All proceeds from the sale of the 45 cases produced will be donated to Long Live Maddi and Teen Safe Driving Campaign Fund, also established in Maddi's name.

Visit www.longlivemaddi.com to learn more about the fund.

LATEST NUMBERS REPORT INCREDIBLE GAINS

BY DAVID BATES

Oregon winemakers are nearly finished bringing in what they predict will be another record-shattering harvest, which is saying something — because the 2014 production numbers are extraordinary.

The 2014 Oregon Vineyard and Winery Census released this summer once again shows that the state's wine industry continues to grow and expand, thanks primarily to Pinot Noir, the state's signature grape.

Compiled by the Southern Oregon University Research Center, the data confirms the state's overall production from last fall's harvest marking the third consecutive year of double-digit gains. Overall production in 2014 topped 78,000 tons, an increase of 39 percent over the previous year

"Oregon wine enjoyed another headliner year across the board fueled by consumer demand," said Ellen Brittan, chairwoman of Oregon Wine Board, which released the report. "Market and sales trends continue to validate the growing acceptance of the exceptional quality wines being produced in all regions of the state."

Every region posted impressive gains, but the northern Willamette Valley, where Pinot Noir dominates, led the way, accounting for nearly two-thirds of overall production and up 41 percent over 2013.

Production of Pinot Noir, one of 16 varietals tallied by researchers, hit 45,239 tons, up from 32,239 the previous year. The growth resulted from more acreage planted, more harvested and greater yields per acre.

In second place, Pinot Gris again shattered last year's record with 13,701 tons produced — up from 10,321. Chardonnay placed third with 3,972 tons; Riesling fourth at 2,194 tons; and Syrah fifth, with 1,370 tons.

Overall, sales of Oregon wine are trending up at 11 percent over the past year, according to the global marketing research firm Nielsen.

Additional acreage in all AVAs continues to be put into grape production. All but three varietals — Merlot, Müller-Thurgau and Sauvignon Blanc — posted increases in planted acreage, yet Müller-Thurgau, grown primarily in the Willamette Valley, saw production gains.

Overall, sales of Oregon wine are trending up at 11 percent over the past year, according to the global marketing research firm Nielsen.

In terms of production value, Pinot jumped from $85.7 million in 2013 to nearly $114 million last year. Pinot Gris hit more than $19 million, up from $16 million.

There is also evidence that the industry's international marketing efforts in recent years are paying off, with the state posting an extraordinary 50-percent jump in export sales.

The growth trend also continues in new wineries. Planning officials in the Pinot Noir hot spot of Yamhill County say new wine industry-related construction in the last couple of years has been very busy. Statewide, the total number of wineries grew to 676, and the number of vineyards in Oregon topped 1,000 for the first time, hitting 1,027 — an 8-percent increase.

"The Oregon wine industry is extremely healthy," Brittan said. "Oregon's increase in sales compares with an industry average of just 4 percent."

Brittan also noted how Oregon continues to enjoy a "stellar reputation" for producing exceptionally fine wine. The much-respected magazine The Wine Advocate, recently rated 357 Oregon wines representing 12 varietals from 13 regions at 90 points or higher.

That quality commands the highest average-per-bottle price of any wine region in the world. Again, according to Nielsen, Oregon's average per-bottle price is $15.59. Globally, it's $7.15, and nationwide, it's less than seven dollars.

But the industry appears poised for more growth thanks to what Wine Enthusiast Magazine calls "the rise of the iGeneration," that 60-million strong market of new wine drinkers born in 1995 or later. They're a tech-savvy bunch expected to use social media to trade notes on what they're drinking and liking.

That's also true of older consumers. According to a report released earlier this year by the Wine Market Council, a national industry group, 62 percent of millennial wine drinkers and 40 percent of GenX consumers are also turning to online outlets such as Facebook and Twitter to discuss wine.

David Bates is a freelance reporter who lives in McMinnville.

Legacy of a Champion

OWP PERSON OF THE YEAR:
COLE DANEHOWER

It's a gloriously sunny autumn afternoon, the day after Thanksgiving, an ideal occasion to savor life and wine with friends. Driving from winery to winery along the twisting country roads in Dundee's Red Hills, we stop atop Worden Hill, site of Maresh Vineyard. Standing on the hilltop, we take in a panorama of vineyards in full golden senescence. Far off in the distance, Mounts Hood, Jefferson and St. Helens are clearly visible. The air is crisp and chilly, tempered by the warmth of the sun.

"In some ways, the Dundee Hills wine country is the heart of Oregon's red wine soul," Cole wrote in his book, "Essential Wines of the Pacific Northwest" (Timber Press, 2010). "It was here that the first pinot noir in the Willamette Valley was planted."

Those words resonate within me, like a great wine with a soul-satisfying, lengthy finish. Cole loved wine and passed that passion down to me, as a father would with his son.

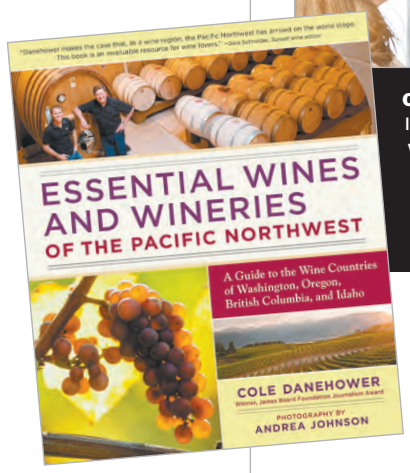

Friends said they barely recognized Cole during his final months. I didn't get the opportunity to see him in his thin, cancer-ravaged state. On the one hand, I'm sad not to have been in his presence one last time, but on the other, I feel he spared me that parting visual memento, taking into consideration how in recent years, I'd lived through grueling end-of-life situations with my mother and grandparents. We kept in touch via e-mail instead.

"Don't know when I'll be up for a visit, frankly," he wrote back in June. "I'm incredibly tired; I look like shit, and most days, I feel like shit. My brain is most noticeably not operating well, and it shows when I try to hold a conversation (due to a combination of painkillers, chemo drugs, and anti-chemo side effects drugs)."

Cole was always one for technology. He was the first person I knew to carry an iPhone, which makes sense considering he was the son of an engineer. His dad helped develop the first generation of mainframe computers.

Now, Cole has joined his father in the great singularity. Cole Nevan Danehower died Aug. 21, 2015, at the age of 60, losing a battle with pancreatic cancer that was in all likelihood unwinnable. Just like that, he was gone. Poof.

Although Cole had made allusions, he didn't disclose to me the precise nature of "health issues" before Northwest Palate Magazine ceased publishing. In a serious tone, he said he'd been consulting specialists and might have to pull back from work for a while, although that never happened.

He wrote more and worked harder. He penned his encyclopedic book about the Pacific Northwest's wine regions, while simultaneously struggling to keep afloat his regional culinary travel magazine. Every week he devoted at least a day to tasting through as many wines as he could.

Bottles would be arranged on every surface around his office, like cast army men positioned on an imaginary battlefield. Cases of new arrivals waited in the wings for deployment; battalions of boxes shipped in from British Columbia, Washington, Oregon and Idaho, reinforcements for future tastings.

Meticulously, Cole brown-bagged each bottle and tagged it with vintage, variety and price. The uniformed soldiers stood at attention on the tasting table, awaiting triage.

Cole was a veteran of hundreds, more likely thousands, of informal and formal wine judgings, including the Oregon State Fair, Greatest of the Grape, World of Wine, Portland Indie Wine Festival, the McMinnville Art & Wine Classic, the Portland Seafood & Wine Festival and Sunset Magazine International Wine Competition, to name a few.

He was also a World War I history buff, so I think he'd appreciate the military analogy. The process of tasting wines for review is a bit like war; it's without question a battle of the

Now with his passing, I realize Cole was right. "Terroir" does include people. Cole, in so many ways, contributed his own personality not only to Oregon, but also to the entire Pacific Northwest wine region. Along with the region's soils and climates, Cole bestowed us with his gift of insight, knowledge, wit and character.

CAMERON NAGEL
NORTHWEST PALATE FOUNDER/CO-PUBLISHER

I had known Cole as a customer at my Burlingame Coffeehouse, Papaccino's, for many years before getting into the wine business. We talked coffee, much like you talk wine. He got wind from an employee that I, with my family, had started a new adventure in 2000 and produced our first vintage in 2003 — this was in 2006, when we were just releasing our Claret and Syrah for the first time. He asked if he could taste the fruits of our labors. I was nervous, to say the least, but, of course, handed him bottles of wine, instead of a cup of coffee over the counter. To my sheer delight, he loved them. This formed another connection for Cole and me. He became one of my go-to people in the wine world. I appreciated his friendship, knowledge and genuine enthusiasm for wine and for life.

I'm sure we'll echo what many others have said already, but Cole was a genuine class act. In a sometimes-exclusive industry, he was a champion for everyone in the Valley, driven by his love of Oregon wines and his desire to see them receive the recognition he knew they deserved. His love and enthusiastic belief in the greatness of Northwest wines was simply infectious; you always knew Cole was rooting for you — and all of your winery peers, too — every step of the way.

AMBER FRIES DUCK POND CELLARS

What a wonderful person. Everybody that came in Shafer Vineyard Cellars always had great things to say about Cole. He had many friends in the Oregon Wine country. I am so glad I got to know him. God bless his family. We here at Shafer Vineyard Cellars send our thoughts to all of his family.

The Cole Danehower Memorial Fund

The family, friends and wine community of Oregon have established the Cole Danehower Memorial Fund to honor the legacy of Cole and his contributions to the development of the Oregon wine industry. The scholarship's intent is to provide financial assistance for a student enrolled in an enology, viticulture, hospitality or culinary arts program with an emphasis on wine. It will be available to a student in 2016. Office of Student Access and Completion (OSAC) has a secure online donation page. Gifts to OSAC scholarship funds are deductible as charitable contributions.

taste buds and a test of mental focus.

For Cole, however, it seemed there was nothing he would rather be doing than tasting wines.

"What should we start with?" Cole asked the first time we tasted together. "Reds or whites?"

I think he was genuinely requesting my preference, but I'd never before tasted wine professionally.

"Whites?" I guessed timidly.

"Yes! And then we'll alternate reds and whites to keep the palate fresh," Cole merrily explained as he poured about two ounces from each bottle into the glasses set before us. We faced each other, mano a mano.

First we swirled, and then we sniffed, plunging our beaks into our glasses, taking big huffs of the aroma. Next, we sipped and slurped, trilling the liquid on the palate, swishing it around a bit more and — spit!

Over and over, we did this. For hours.

It was fun at first, but became torturous, tedious after a while. During a bathroom break, I glanced in the mirror. Staring back were bloodshot eyes and purple-stained teeth. I looked horrible, yet happy. I was bantering about wine with a master taster.

Based on these sessions, Cole would write about 100 tasting notes for each issue of Northwest Palate. It just came naturally to him; that's what he did.

Here's his description of one wine he found particularly pleasing: "Mellow butter yellow color. Fragrant notes of apple blossoms and peach combine with gentle toast and caramel tones on the appealing nose. Plush in the mouth, with an almost oily texture, the wine delivers full flavors of butterscotch-accented apple and guava fruit, with subtle tones of baking spices in the background. The fruit-sweet mid-palate gives way to a lively acidity that imparts an uplifting feel to the substantial warm fruitiness. Clean, fresh and full of flavor, this is an easy drinking and pairing Chardonnay that will go well with a cold-smoked chicken picnic."

His prose had swing. He made wine sing. He was the original "Inspired Imbiber" — the name of his blog, at a time when blogging was still cool. He championed wineries great and small. He was a humanitarian and a gentleman; a lover, not a fighter.

> "I have great admiration for the way he weaved through life and this industry; selfless and with endless encouraging words for those trying to find their place."
> ANDREW TURNER, VALLEY WINE MERCHANTS

Cole began writing about the region's wines in 1998, when he moved to Oregon. He put out the quarterly Oregon Wine Report, for which he won a James Beard award in 2004. He loved to tell the story of how he used the occasion to alert the "fooderati" in the East about the "wild Northwest."

"I told them, 'Oregon may seem like an obscure outpost of civilization to you, but it's not. It's a center of food and wine activity in its own right,'" he explained to The Oregonian after the awards ceremony.

A few years later, Cole purchased a majority share of Northwest Palate and served as its editor-in-chief from 2006 to 2012. Each issue was packed with coverage of the region's culinary bounty.

He used his "Starters" column to spotlight real issues of the day, voicing concern about the health of salmon runs and the alarming die off of bees.

But it's his book that will serve as his lasting legacy. In it, he extrapolated his grand unifying enological equation: "Great wine = (place + plant) x people."

Cole's genius was to factor in "terroir," but multiply it by the influence of those men and women who grow the grapes and make the wine. Conversation and collaboration are the paths to full appreciation. It was his way of defining sense of place, and how fortunate we are to live in this wonderland of food and wine.

ADMIRED

Cole was one of my favorite people in the Oregon wine industry. He was genuine, nice, thoughtful and professional at all times, but he was also a very caring and supportive individual, easy to talk to, and while he was very articulate, he was a great listener.

GOODFELLOW FAMILY CELLARS

It was always so nice to be around Cole to share experiences and our knowledge, comments and tasting thoughts on many wines as he was in the shop and always fun to help him discover a new find. Cole was always someone we all looked up to in the industry. At numerous trade events how he would always remember so many peoples' names. It was so fun to always taste with Cole and compare notes. This was one of the most genuinely human individuals I think I've ever come in contact with.

MIKE WALLIS THE CELLAR ON 10TH

I, like many others, was graciously welcomed by Cole when I began working in the Oregon wine industry. Shortly after opening Valley Wine Merchants, Cole reached out to me with some wonderful advice and encouragement. I next ran into him at an event in Portland, and, in classic Cole fashion, he excused himself briefly from a conversation to say hello. He said that he still owed me a visit and shared with me that he'd heard many wonderful things about the shop. I have great admiration for the way he weaved through life and this industry; selfless and with endless encouraging words for those trying to find their place. He helped me find mine, and I'll always be grateful!

ANDREW TURNER VALLEY WINE MERCHANTS

Cole was a kind spirit; and though our interactions were limited, he was always positive and kind. Some folks touch you by their demeanor; his was kind, positive and encouraging from the early days of our winery.

MAURICIO COLLADA JR. MD

During our "Wine Happy Hour" meetings, we would choose a bottle to share and talk about the Oregon wine business, marketing and PR. He was one of my first wine writer associates to share insights as a writer, which helped me as a winery publicist. I will miss Cole and those meetings.

DEEPLY MISSED

There are so many times I enjoyed his company and so many things he did on the industry's and our behalf. His remarkably gracious nature, his kindness and emotional intelligence were among his greatest traits. Cole had a remarkable grasp of what mattered about what we did as winemakers. His insight about how people viewed what we did and how we should tell the Oregon story was among his greatest contributions — terroir is inseparable from those who work with the land and the fruit. I remember with today's clarity how he would introduce Oregon wines and us at conferences and seminars and how it inspired us to pursue our work and how proud we were of how he defined us and of him.

JIM BERNAU WILLAMETTE VALLEY VINEYARDS

He was a partisan for Oregon wines at a time when it wasn't easy or popular. Because he understood the wines implicitly, his interview questions were always germane, and his writing circumspect and reasonable, seasoned by his wry sense of humor.

DON LANGE, LANGE ESTATE

Back in those days, when Cole came on the scene, Oregon winemakers were hard-pressed to find support in the media. But Cole understood, enthusiastically, Northwest wines and wrote about them in the context of that understanding and enthusiasm. He was a partisan for Oregon wines at a time when it wasn't easy or popular. Because he understood the wines implicitly, his interview questions were always germane, and his writing circumspect and reasonable, seasoned by his wry sense of humor. We always looked forward to talking — and drinking wine! — with him. We miss him.

DON LANGE LANGE ESTATE

In 2014, we had asked Cole to moderate our first formal vertical of Nicholas Vineyard Pinot Noirs. We remember his presentation to this day. Thinking it would be a nice follow-up, we asked him to join us in May to sell and autograph "Essential Wines and Wineries of the Pacific Northwest." He happily sold all 24 copies, personalizing autographs and chatting with guests. At the end of the day, he took us aside and broke the news that he was scheduled to start treatment in three days. After cursing the diagnosis together, we asked him why in heaven's name he wasn't at the beach or the mountains instead of another wine event. His answer, in true Cole form, was that he wanted to be with us, and had made us a promise to be there. I have the final copy of "Essential Wines" he signed that day. Next to his name he wrote "Anam Cara," Celtic for Soul Friend.

SHEILA NICHOLAS ANAM CARA CELLARS

Cole, you combined talent with expertise, warmth, wit and compassion. Thank you so much for all you did for our industry and the smiles you brought to those who serve it. Thank you also for being so welcoming to me when I moved here and mentoring to my team. You will be dearly, dearly missed.

DIXIE LEE HUEY TRELLIS GROWTH PARTNERS

I met Cole at one of the first wine tastings I ever participated in within months of Jimi's passing in early 2005. I remember he was kind. He shared with me his interactions with Jimi, characterizing his boisterous passion for Riesling and winemaking to the point where I could picture Jimi in my head. It wasn't often in these early days that I can recall a conversation, let alone the effect it had on me. Things were quite blurry at that time.

I continued to see Cole at various events over the years. He always came to the table with a smile on his face; I could tell he was genuinely happy to see Brooks at the event. There was always a quiet undertone, a deeper look in his eye, one of victory that said, "Yes! The legacy continues." He would say great things about the wine and question me about what winemaker Chris Williams and I were doing to move Brooks forward. He always ended with compliments and words of encouragement…

His words always felt like a high-five and a hug. Words that when you are so deep in trying to do the right thing, to make something work, to continue someone's dream, they make you realize you have made it into your own. The words of someone who saw where you were going before you got there. The words of a true fan. Cole was an ardent, enthusiastic supporter of Brooks and of me.

I miss you, Cole, but know you are in good company with four of my other top fans: Mom, Dad, Jimi and my sweet Katie. I now have another angel.

PRESENTING THE 2016 OREGON WINE A-LIST AWARDS

BY HILARY BERG

The people of Oregon take their food seriously and are proud to have access to such abundance from their own "backyard." From fresh seafood to grass-fed beef to all kinds of organic produce, the local ingredients featured at many of the state's restaurants are the makings for serious chef envy.

Add all the beverages produced with the same artisan mentality, and the Oregon dining scene is hard to top. Wine, coffee, beer, cider and spirits are integral to the state's culinary craze. It's difficult to think of food without drink, especially wine — no bias here.

For a surprising number of restaurants, homegrown wine is not as high a priority as other provisions. Regions in France, Italy and our neighbor to the south make up the majority of the selections. Meanwhile, wine made merely miles from the Rose City represents only a handful of wines on the big city's menus.

To bring awareness of Oregon wine to restaurants, here and beyond, Oregon Wine Press and Oregon Wine Board are proud to continue the Oregon Wine A-List Awards, honoring restaurants that truly support our world-class region.

The wine stewards who champion Oregon wine are not wanting for variety — from Albariño to Zinfandel — or quality, as wineries continue impressing judges, national media and more.

We know our wine can compete with the best anywhere in the world, and to those restaurants that share in our pride, OWP, OWB and the 600-plus wineries thank you for your support.

Oregon Wine A-List Awards

Congratulations to the restaurants (marked with an A-List icon on the following pages) that have earned a spot on the 2016 Oregon Wine A-List. Those winning "Regional Spotlight Awards" — referred to as Regional Stars in 2015 — are listed below. These restaurants really set the bar in their approach to promoting Oregon wine. The winner of the "Wine Program of the Year" will be announced at the Oregon Wine Symposium, Feb. 23–24, in Portland.

2016 Regional Spotlight Awards

PORTLAND

Oregon to plant grapes."

The fact that the number of Oregon wineries has increased dramatically in the last decade emphasizes the continued appeal to make Oregon wine.

Bradley, and others, have been quick to point out the hard work involved in the wine industry. Often winemakers are asked for advice from those interested in entering the industry, and frequently the winemakers' answers are conservative and cautionary.

"It's that whole romance thing, you know? ... And when you're out there at 5:30 in the morning spraying grapes, trying to keep powdery mildew at bay, you're going 'Yea, this is pretty romantic.' It's a lot of work and you can't emphasize that enough to people who are saying 'Oh, I think I'll plant a vineyard.' It is a lot of work."

In just the 54 years since Richard Sommer planted Pinot Noir in Roseburg, the successful results from the hard work that Bradley and many others reference is evident. Oregon's reputation for wine has grown. When speculating on Oregon wine industry's potential for growth, Bradley describes conversations he and his family have had with people outside Oregon as an indication of further growth potential.

"Almost the first thing they say is, 'Oh, Oregon wines, Oregon Pinot Noir.' It used to be "Oh, Oregon, where it rains all the time.' But, you know, that's really changed. So, given that people are so aware of Oregon wines and sort of anxious to taste them, to experience Oregon wines — I think that we've not seen the end of our growth ... People are looking for the Oregon wine experience, and I think we're at a growth point, and I think it's going to continue. I really do."

People traveling here seeking the "Oregon wine experience" is proof of the impressive role the industry plays in the state, both economically and culturally. It was not that long ago that the state boasted fewer than 20 wineries; now there are more than 500, with an economic impact in the billions of dollars.

The story of the rise is at the heart of the OWHA's mission, and hearing first-hand accounts from pioneers like Bradley — who invested themselves early, when success was far from a given — demonstrates the uniqueness of the narrative, and the critical importance of collecting it.

As Bradley poignantly stated, "I hope it's not too late to scramble around and get this history put together and sort it out and, you know, I'm sure it's not, but it takes someone to do that."

For Bradley, and for all people who make up the Oregon wine industry, the OWHA will continue to capture their stories – the stories of Oregon wine.

THE EYRIE 50TH

leaves the winery, it goes through an inspection process, after which it's topped off, and the old cork is replaced with a Diam conglomerate cork alternative that resists infection from the chemicals responsible for what is known as "cork taint." It's an incredibly labor-intensive process employed by no other winery in the world — Eyrie should be applauded for their efforts.

The certification program was just one of the news items revealed at the 50th anniversary celebration, a sign Jason is forging his own history. Other developments include a sparkling wine program — guests were able to taste the first effort, a delicious bubbly made with Pinot Meunier — as well as the planting of new grape varieties, including Trousseau Noir, the upcoming release of five new single-vineyard Pinot Noirs and plans for a new winery that will overlook the original vines David and Diana planted in 1966 and 1967.

In a letter to a friend, David described his epiphany by simply writing, "I turned wineward." Those three little words led to the creation of one of the world's great winegrowing regions, a valley where more than 300 wineries have followed the trail blazed by "Papa Pinot" and his family.

The 50th anniversary celebration was a fitting tribute to that storied past, but it was much more than that. It was also a signal that the winery is in good hands, and with any luck, fortunate wine lovers will convene Feb. 22, 2065 to marvel over some very mature Trousseau Noir.

Michael Alberty is the owner of Storyteller Wine Company in Southwest Portland.

president of Washington State Wine, which promotes awareness of wineries and growers in Washington and its cross-border AVAs. "This isn't about state borders. It's about the Pacific Northwest and our growing reputation as home to world-class wines. We feel this new AVA designation further recognizes the unparalleled terroir of this area."

Country Financial now insures wineries, vineyards, tasting rooms

When you've put years of labor into building a business that celebrates Oregon's world-renowned wine country, protecting your efforts and planning for the future is a serious subject. That's where Country Financial can help. With the personalized service of the Heidi Moore Agency backed by the strength of Country Financial, your livelihood has never been in better hands.

Established in the 1920s as a farm insurer, Country Financial has long been an industry leader in insurance and financial products and services. Offering a full spectrum of insurance products for home, auto, agriculture, life and disability, the company has a lengthy record of outstanding private and commercial coverage. The company also offers exceptional financial and retirement services, enabling clients to effectively plan for the future. But Country Financial now offers even more security, tailored specifically for the vinicultural industry.

With the unveiling of Country Financial's long-awaited all-inclusive vineyard/winery policy, the Heidi Moore Agency is perfectly poised to offer you comprehensive coverage designed specifically for the winemaking industry. "Our new vineyard/winery policy is a remarkable solution for the hundreds of wineries, vineyards and farms in our area," said Heidi. "We cover it all from vine to wine — and everything in between." Heidi said her agency can cover every aspect of a client's personal and professional life, greatly simplifying matters for policyholders. "When one person and one agency handles it all, the client can focus all his or her energy on building and growing the business," she said.

Heidi knows firsthand the efforts required to earn a living from the land. She has deep roots in northwestern Oregon and a lifelong connection to the Willamette Valley's agriculture industry. Raised on a dairy farm on the Oregon coast, Heidi hails from a multi-generational farming family. "I grew up in Tillamook, raised in dairy farming life," said Heidi. "My sister and I worked alongside our parents, learning the value of hard work."

After graduating from high school on the coast, Heidi enrolled Linfield College and fell in love with the Yamhill Valley. "I love it here, everything about it," she said. "That's why we decided to settle here." Heidi and her husband, Eric, bought a small farm outside of Amity, in the heart of wine country. Between the farm and the couple's three children, Heidi feels a deep connection with the local community — a closeness that keeps growing stronger. "Our oldest is a member of the track team at Linfield and our two younger girls are busy with athletics and being part of high school life," she said. "We absolutely love living here."

Heidi said she also appreciates the close-knit structure of rural farming communities. "It's all about relationships — everybody knows everybody and we're all here for each other," she said. Heidi has built her agency on the same foundation of nurturing relationships. "My heart belongs to agriculture and to the people who make it happen," she said. "I love creating individualized solutions for each client. Every situation is different and personalized service is crucial to make sure each client's unique needs are met."

A naturally dedicated person herself, Heidi understands the passion her clients have for their own work. "Our tag line 'insure what you love' really sums it up," said Heidi. "I make sure my clients are fully informed and at peace with what we are insuring. I know how much time and devotion they've invested in their businesses."

Heidi pointed out that Country Financial's agricultural roots are as strong as ever today. "We are a big company built on farming integrity and values," she said. "We really have a heart for our policyholders."

If worries about your business keep you up at night, Country Financial's new all-inclusive vineyard/winery policy might be the perfect solution. "Plain and simple, we're here to help!" said Heidi. "Our goal is to bring peace of mind to all our clients." Call Heidi at 503-472-2545 or visit online at www.insurewhatyoulove.com. Peace of mind is closer than you think.
