Gratitude in Action

HONORING VETERANS WITH NO WORDS NECESSARY

I've witnessed it several times, and in each instance, I am caught off guard, feeling emotional and awkward at the same time.

I'm talking about impromptu public displays of veteran appreciation.

Although I am humbled by their service and sacrifice, I have yet to show my gratitude in this particular fashion. I am referring to those who make it a point to personally thank people in uniform while in the airport, at the market or elsewhere.

"Thank you for your service" is the typical offering, yet those five words can elicit a gamut of emotions and reactions as diverse as the people being thanked.

So, what is best way to honor a veteran? Not being part of a military family, I can't even pretend to know, so I researched online for some solid advice.

In an article on the subject by Task & Purpose, a news and culture site geared toward American vets, Jennifer Dolsen, U.S. Army veteran, offered, "The most meaningful ways people can thank a veteran is through action. Volunteer with a veteran-related organization or welcome a veteran friend to join for a workout or group activity. Even visiting or researching community war memorials or monuments shows the potential for a deeper understanding of the sacrifices made by veterans."

She continued, "People thanking veterans genuinely through action is a far more meaningful gesture of gratitude than a couple of words."

In the spirit of Dolsen's advice, our OWP Persons of the Year are living examples of gratitude in action — and they make great Pinot, to boot. Marine Corps veterans Ben Martin, Ryan Mills and Paul Warmbier created Dauntless Wine Cœmpany in order to help their brothers and sisters transition successfully into day-to-day life back home. Turn to page 28 to read about their mission and how they are donating time and profits to veteran organizations with plans to hire an all-veteran staff in the vineyard and winery.

What a fascinating story, business model and incredibly worthy cause. When it came to select OWP's highest annual honor, the choice was clear. How to thank them for their service was not, until now...

Although the three men are appreciative of kind words, an even better gesture would be a visit to their tasting room at ADEA in Gaston (www.dauntlesswine.co), where you can try and buy the wines, making their mission possible and your cellar more meaningful.

"Our bud break was about a week earlier than what we call normal, but who knows what normal is these days? The bud set was good; crop set was heavy. The growing season was very nice with less hot days in July than last year, which provided more acidity to our grapes than last year. Our quality was very good to excellent, both from the estate grapes and outside sources. We received our first grapes on Sept. 3 and finished harvesting our estate grapes on Oct. 12, so our crush season was nicely spread out. Our yields were a bit heavier than expected. Overall, we are very pleased with the crop."

STEVE BICKFORD
MT. HOOD WINERY

"For us, 2016 was an excellent growing season and will go down as a great vintage as we were blessed with wonderful weather. Everything in the vine's growth cycle occurred two to three weeks early (and in some cases, more) from bud break to harvest. The spring and summer were warm with very little rainfall followed by some cooling near end of harvest. The crop looks great, and we are expecting outstanding big reds (e.g. Cabernet), with our other varietals being balanced and of good quality. Our biggest challenge has been the logistics of harvest; every varietal and vineyard site was getting ripe within a narrow time frame, hence, tank space at the winery became critical. Yields this year are consistent with the last several years and met our projections."

EARLY VINTAGE DELIVERS CONDENSED CRUSH, GREAT QUALITY, MORE NORMAL YIELDS

REPORT BY OREGON WINE BOARD

Similar to the last two vintages, the 2016 growing season continued to push the envelope for defining the new normal in Oregon as one of the earliest on record. An unusually warm spring gave way to moderate summer conditions, which provided even growing conditions through véraison. Though it was an intense growing season due to the early start, the fruit produced throughout the state resulted in wonderful concentration and complexity with characteristic natural acidity.

Bud break kicked off the vintage two to four weeks earlier than normal. A short heat spell at bloom condensed the flowering period, resulting in a smaller fruit set for most producers. Summer provided average conditions with fewer heat spikes than the 2014 or 2015 vintages, which led to smaller berry size and a higher concentration of flavors. Warmer than normal conditions in most areas in August shepherded along the early vintage and most vineyards started to harvest early ripening varieties during the last week of the month or early September.

The 2016 vintage saw practically immaculate fruit with few signs of disease, pest or bird effects. Vineyards and wineries in the Willamette Valley were largely finished with harvest by the end of September to early-October, while wineries in other regions carried on through mid-to-late October depending on the varieties planted. Because of the cooler temperatures in September and October, growing degree days (GDD) accumulation in the western valleys ended up between the totals seen in 2013 and 2014. Lower GDD was also seen in Eastern Oregon and Washington, where the coolest conditions in the Pacific Northwest were experienced.

Depending on the region of the state, producers are reporting a mix of higher-than-normal and lower-than-normal yields due to weather conditions through fruit set, which will likely average out and result in total production levels closer to normal for Oregon, unlike the last two large harvests.

Southern Oregon

"We started with an earlier-than-normal bud break, but then, we had a cool spell for three to four weeks that put the brakes on the season. With the exception of three short heat spikes, the cooler-to-average conditions provided the opportunity for much longer hang times than in recent years, allowing for richer flavors to develop. It's also important to note that our average start date for irrigation was the third week in July, versus the first week of July during the past three years. We actually harvested some fruit in the Dundee Hills and McMinnville earlier than at the DANCIN Estate located just outside Jacksonville. Our yields were within 5 percent of average, and the quality of the crop has been amazing."

DANCIN VINEYARDS

Abacela, Umpqua Valley, Southern Oregon

"Every aspect of the 2016 vintage in the Rogue Valley can be consistently characterized in one word: early. Moderate weather through the entire summer provided even growing conditions. Adapting to the third straight year of early and warm vintages, we initiated night harvesting, which allowed us to deliver cold fruit to the winery and wrap up picking by 10:30 a.m. daily, a real saving grace. Overall, quality looks to be quite good to exceptional. The Pinot Noirs are quite forward, with dark fruit and well-ripened tannins yet retaining very good natural acidity. The late ripening reds had the opportunity to develop dark purple/black color, mature tannins and dense, concentrated flavors with great structure. And, 2016 may be an exceptionally vintage for Gewürztraminer. We were close to our projected yields, yet overall most varieties seemed to be shy of normal."

"The 2016 vintage is turning out to be one of the most interesting vintages of my 16-year career. Bud break started about two weeks earlier than normal, which carried over to bloom, and from that point on, we continued to lose ground on our early start with véraison and harvest being about seven days ahead of normal, though four days later than last year. Harvest progressed with a nice slow pace, and we were able to pick all of our fruit at the perfect ripeness. At the time of press, the wines were showing really well with what we believe to be exceptional quality. All indications point to a really exceptional vintage."

JASON MAGNAGHI
FIGGINS FAMILY WINES

"Thankfully, we did not have any winter damage going into the 2016 growing season. For the fourth year in a row, bud break was two weeks earlier than the historical average, but we were fortunate to not have any nights requiring frost control. Good weather prevailed throughout April, May and June, while July, which is typically hot, was cooler than the norm. The summer heat came back in August, and we were gearing up for an early start to harvest, but on Sept. 1, the temps dropped into the 70s, and we only had seven days over 80 degrees for the month. I think this made a big difference in the overall balance of the wines. We started picking on Sept. 15 with a block of Syrah from the Rocks District. October continued with mild temperatures and more precipitation than we are used to seeing. Overall, the vines were fruitful, producing typical crop loads with excellent quality."

"If 2014 and 2015 made very good wines, the 2016 vintage may be headed toward greatness. The generally warmer temperatures throughout the spring and parts of summer led to one of the earliest seasons on record in the last 25 years at our estate… We began harvesting Pinot Noir on Sept. 3 from our estate, and continued steadily through Sept. 15. The last of our old-vine estate Viognier was harvested on Sept. 28 and our four clones of estate Syrah picked on Oct. 12. Due to the variable weather during flowering, we saw small berries and small clusters in each of our estate vineyards that lead to depth, intensity and concentration in the young wines. The 2014 and 2015 vintages make the 2016 harvest seem small by comparison, though we are extremely pleased with our yields this year, which were much closer to our historical average of 2 tons per acre."

TOM GERRIE
CRISTOM VINEYARDS

"For the third straight year, we enjoyed an earlier than usual harvest with picking on Ribbon Ridge starting at the beginning of September and finishing up by the end of the month. With the warm, dry growing season, clusters were ripe and flavors well-developed. Surprisingly though, acidity didn't drop as quickly as expected, leaving us with expressive flavors and great energy in the wines. The wines show aromas of fresh fruits and alluring floral notes, but with more minerality than I typically find at this point. With excellent ripeness in the fruit, structure and color came easily. While plentiful, I find the tannins early on to be more fine-grained and alcohol levels to be in the mid-13s for Pinot noir. As the wines are now all in barrel and beginning what I hope will be a graceful period of aging, the cornerstone of the vintage seems to be balance with fruit, acidity and tannin in fine equilibrium. It's early, but it's hard not to like what 2016 gave us."

"The season started ahead of usual with bud break being one to two weeks earlier than average. Typical (wet, mild) spring weather gave way to a very hot spell right at bloom that pushed the flowering to a very condensed timeframe. Summer was mild with slightly more rain and cooler temperatures than we have seen the last few vintages punctuated by hot periods that pushed things along. It was the shortest and earliest harvest in our more than 40 years of doing this. We love the quality of fruit — lower yields and small berry size led to really intense aromatics and ripe fruit tannins that will show really well in the cellar. Overall, we are below our expected yield. but we are seeing more concentration and complexity due to the lower crop size."

VINEYARD WORKER HEALTHCARE PROGRAM STRONGER THAN EVER AT 25

STORY BY NEIL ZAWICKI

For 25 years, seasonal vineyard workers and their family members have gained access to health care through ¡Salud! Services, a program providing basic medical screenings, education and advocacy at no charge.

An entity of Tuality Healthcare in Hillsboro, ¡Salud! is a collaborative effort and exists primarily because of its annual auction, at which 43 winemakers offer one-of-a-kind cuvées for the fundraiser. This year, the ¡Salud! Cuvée Tasting and Big Board Auction will take place Nov. 11 at Ponzi Vineyards in Sherwood, followed by the 25th Anniversary Celebration Gala and Auction at the Sentinel Hotel in Portland on Nov. 12. Last year's two-day auction raised a record-breaking $800,000.

In an arena where community health organizations fall by the wayside for lack of funding or interest, the fact ¡Salud! is a quarter-century old stands as a testament to the industry. Another way to consider it is that supporting the program is good business. In fact, most on the fundraising committee are winery owners. The service is not only a way to offer a benefit to the vital crews working in both the vineyards and cellars, it's a way to provide care to a population possibly averse to visiting the doctor.

To this end, said ¡Salud! Manager Leda Garside, the primary mission is direct access to healthcare, which means being able to refer patients, who need more than the ¡Salud! team can offer, to specialists. In 2015, 3,875 workers and family members were registered into the program, and more than 3,000 medical and dental encounters were documented. The program's roving wellness clinic saw more than 800 workers last year.

"We would not be able to be successful without the many hours of volunteer leadership from the wine industry principals who work year-round, side-by-side with us to execute the auction and raise funds for this project." MARIE McCANDLESS

"We want to make the vineyards a point of entry for healthcare," said Garside.

That "point of entry" got a great boost in 2014, when funds from 100 donors afforded the team an improved mobile clinic. Smaller than the previous motor home-sized vehicle that ¡Salud! used to borrow, the new machine, a custom converted Dodge Ram Promaster with all the appropriate medical equipment, cost the program $150,000. Because it's smaller, it allows easier access to vineyards and wineries. Garside said the team named it Lady Bug.

"Little, but mighty," she said.

Inside the van, patients can receive a full complement of clinical services. These "Wellness Clinics" ensure prevention through health education and screenings. On-site tests results are explained to patients and referrals are arranged if further care is needed. With a focus on promoting wellness, the program offers: cholesterol, diabetes and vision screenings, blood pressure checks, flu and tetanus vaccinations, and occupational health, nutrition and mental health information.

The medical team members are experts in the specific health needs of the Latino population. Garside says hypertension and diabetes are prominent health concerns among them.

"We're another safety net," she said. "We're a place where they can feel comfortable asking questions about their health."

Garside said the program is also valuable by helping workers to become familiar with what services are available in their communities, including family members.

Luz Carbajal is one.

She and her husband, José Maria Sanchez, moved to Oregon from Barra de la Cruz, Mexico, in 2003. José works the vineyards, as do two grown sons. They introduced her to the program 10 years ago. Had it not been for her first visit with ¡Salud!, her diabetes would not have been discovered. She has since been referred to a specialist, and because of the program, her regular doctor visits cost her very little; her co-pay is only $15.

"¡Salud! is a huge help for me in terms of cost," she said.

Without the program, Carbajal said not only would her diabetes have gone undetected, but getting the treatment she needs would have been extremely difficult.

Along with the medical services, ¡Salud! also subcontracts with dental clinics and, in the past, has offered such services in the field. To provide dental services at the work site, the program partners with Medical Teams International and Pacific University, paying a stipend to each for their services.

Yet another way ¡Salud! helps is to offer first aid certification training. Between 80 and 100 workers and vineyard managers become certified through ¡Salud! each year.

The impact on the general health of the seasonal worker community was evident at Left Coast Cellars on Sept. 14, where a little more than 30 workers were

Founded in 1982 by wine pioneer, entrepreneur and philanthropist Jess Jackson, Jackson Family Wines and its wineries, which include 50 renowned brands, are led by Chairperson Barbara Banke and the Jackson family.

The company began making its first inroads into the Willamette Valley in 2013. In March of that year, JFW acquired the first two of three parcels of Zena Crown Vineyard, located in the Eola-Amity Hills AVA (American Viticultural Area), and Maple Grove Vineyard, a 655-acre former Christmas tree farm southwest of Monmouth.

In May 2013, the company announced the purchase of the final parcel at Zena — the three blocks total 80 acres of vines — as well as Gran Moraine, a 200-acre vineyard in the Yamhill-Carlton AVA. Three months later, JFW bought Soléna Estate's 15,000-case winery plus 35 acres of adjacent vines outside Yamhill; this location now serves as the Gran Moraine tasting room and production facility.

2016 Acquisitions

Evergreen Buildings, McMinnville

In mid-January 2016, a judge sitting in the federal bankruptcy court in Delaware approved sale of two buildings on the former Evergreen International Aviation campus in McMinnville — across from the Evergreen Aviation & Space Museum campus — to Jackson Family Wines.

JFW submitted the high bid of $4.6 million in October 2015. Approval was delayed by a fight over whether Alfred Guiliano, federally appointed trustee for the bankrupt airline, was legally required to grant road and utility easements across the properties to the earlier buyer of the building next door at 3800, Rhodium Loan Servicing, which out-bid JFW to secure it.

The parties participated in a hearing held December 2015 in Oregon in which Rhodium was awarded two of the three easements it sought. However, Rhodim and Jackson subsequently negotiated a private superceding agreement, which will require Rhodium to acquire road access by other means.

Penner-Ash Wine Cellars, Newberg

Jackson Family Wines, and Lynn and Ron Penner-Ash, founders/owners of Penner-Ash Wine Cellars, announced on April 18, 2016, plans to combine efforts to produce, market and sell Penner-Ash wines.

Under the terms of the agreement, Lynn Penner-Ash continues in her role as winemaker and retains a continuing interest in the success of the Penner-Ash brand. JFW acquired substantially all of Penner-Ash Wine Cellars' business assets, including the winery and approximately 15 acres of estate vineyards. JFW has since focused its efforts on providing enhanced sales, marketing, distribution and back-office administrative support.

Taylor Building, McMinnville

Family members of California's Jackson Family Wines have purchased downtown McMinnville's historic Taylor Hardware building, located at 608 Third St.

Jeff Dale, who inherited the building when his father, Ethan, died last year, announced July 19, 2016, sale of the property to Katie Jackson and Shaun Kajiwara of Healdsburg, California.

Jackson is the oldest daughter of Barbara Banke and the late Jess Jackson, founders of JFW. She serves as the company's vice president of sustainability and external affairs, and Kajiwara manages the company's extensive Mendocino County vineyard holdings.

Despite the close association, the couple made the purchase through a new, independent corporate entity: Historic 3rd & Ford LLC.

Jackson and Kajiwara have begun establishing local roots of their own. They recently purchased the Bramble Hill Vineyard, a Pinot Noir vineyard located in the Ribbon Ridge AVA.

The couple plans to renovate and restore the former hardware building, constructed in 1917 by J.L. Fletcher. The building features 6,600 square feet on the ground floor and 6,000 in the basement. The second floor contains a similar amount of space, apportioned among four apartment units. Jackson and Kajiwara apparently plan to lease space to companies and individuals.

Willakenzie Estate, Yamhill

Jackson Family Wines continues its unprecedented expansion into the Oregon market with the Oct. 5, 2016 acquisition of Willakenzie Estate, located in the Yamhill-Carlton AVA.

"The distinct, vivid wines of Willakenzie Estate complement our Willamette Valley offerings," said Hugh Reimers, president of JFW. "Welcoming Willakenzie to our family not only adds to our luxury Pinot Noir vineyard holdings and winemaking capabilities, but also introduces highly regarded Pinot Gris to our Willamette Valley portfolio."

Co-founded by Bernard and Ronni Lacroute, after his successful career in technology and hers in teaching French, Willakenzie celebrated a return to Bernard's Burgundian roots. The couple began planting the estate vineyards in 1992 and made their first wine in 1995, inside the brand new, modern gravity-flow winery.

With the belief that wines reflect a sense of place, the winery was named after the site's predominant sedimentary soil type. With a foundation in terroir-driven wines, Willakenzie has established a reputation for making elegant, balanced wines. Thirteen Pinot Noir clones are represented in the vineyards, displaying a wide array of flavors and sensory components. The estate also features Pinot Gris and Pinot

Talking Terroir

INTERNATIONAL TERROIR CONGRESS IN OREGON

BY RYAN STEVENS

Eric Asimov once wrote, "If you want to start an argument in the wine world — and believe me, it's not hard to do — all you have to do is mention the word 'terroir.'"

For those attending the 11th annual International Terroir Congress at Linfield College in McMinnville, the discussions about the subject were educational, not so confrontational, as brilliant minds from the world wine community — Argentina, Australia, Austria, Brazil, Canada, Chile, Finland, France, Greece, Germany, Hungary, New Zealand, Italy, Portugal, Serbia, Slovenia, Switzerland and the U.S. — covered topics as varied as their accents.

During the five-day conference, intricate composites of data filled the room via screens and presenters, both new to the field and veterans, alike. From the levels of potassium in alternating soil types of Virginia, to the ongoing studies on how drainage affects roots in Portugal, papers revealed fine detail.

What is terroir? A simplified definition: the complete natural environment in which a particular wine is produced, including factors such as soil, topography and climate, and the resulting characteristic taste and flavor imparted to a wine from the environment in which it is produced.

Terroir is complicated, to say the least. There are countless soil types, climates, microclimates, trends, beliefs and environmental effects, and nearly as many ideas on how to define the all-encompassing word. Each year, the congress sets out to explore terroir from a scientific point of view; each year the nuances revealed are as layered as the most complex of wines.

One of the most compelling presentations was delivered by Portland State's Dr. Scott Burns. "The Importance of Soil and Geology in Tasting Terroir: A Case History from the Willamette Valley, Oregon." Although his expertise is geology and soil, Burns' grasp of terroir's many components was evident.

"Seven main factors affect the taste of a wine. They are the different types of grapes, the geology and resulting soils, the climate, the soil hydrology, the physiography of the site, the winemaker and the vineyard management techniques." DR. SCOTT BURNS

"Seven main factors affect the taste of a wine," Burns explained. "They are the different types of grapes, the geology and resulting soils, the climate, the soil hydrology, the physiography of the site, the winemaker and the vineyard management techniques. The first five of these factors comprise what the French call terroir, 'the taste of the place.' Terroir differs from wine region to wine region around the world."

Following in his footsteps, Burns' PhD student, Kathryn Nora Barnard, focused on Oregon's most celebrated varietal in her research, "The Terroir of Pinot Noir Wine in the Willamette Valley, Oregon: A Broad Analysis of Vineyard Soil, Grape

In Memoriam

Wayne Hitchings (1945–2016)

PHOTO PROVIDED

Born April 17, 1945, in Lynn, Massachusetts, Wayne Hitchings died Sept. 5, 2016, at a hospital in Roseburg.

After graduating from high school, Hitchings was working for Bell Telephone in New England when he was drafted by the U.S. Army to Vietnam. His service eventually led him to Anchorage, where he worked as a missile tracking operator. A love of the outdoors kept him there after his tour ended.

In Alaska, Hitchings raised a family and built two successful businesses. In his spare time, he'd sail to the South Pacific, fly his plane over the North Slope and hunt wildlife with his camera. Hitchings was always on the lookout for a new adventure. In the early 1990s, he found a rather challenging one in Douglas County, Oregon.

Unexpectedly, Hitchings helped his friend, Dr. Bill Larson, finance land in Southern Oregon for his mother's retirement. Meanwhile, seven acres of established Pinot Noir and Gewürztraminer vines piqued Hitchings' interest. He eventually bought out Larson and spent the next two decades acquiring adjoining properties and planting grapevines — currently 450 acres with plantings of Pinot Noir, Baco Noir, Pinot Gris, Pinot Blanc, Chardonnay, Syrah, Tempranillo, Gewürztraminer, Riesling and early Muscat.

From the outset, Hitchings suspected his property had unique features, including red Jory soil not typically found in the Umpqua Valley. In 2002, Hitchings compiled the essential data and petitioned the Alcohol and Tobacco Tax and Trade Bureau (TTB) to recognize his property as a single-vineyard AVA. In early 2005, the TTB considered objections regarding historical record, uniqueness, boundaries, etc., and ruled in favor of Hitchings, settling on the name Red Hill Douglas County AVA.

With the help of Guillermo Guitron, his vineyard manager of 19 years, Hitchings created a vast dry-farmed vineyard selling quality fruit to an average of five to seven wineries a year. He established the Sienna Ridge Estate brand with his wife, Glenda Dodson, and built a tasting room on the estate. Terry Brandborg of Brandborg Wines in Elkton made the majority of Sienna Ridge wines for Hitchings from 2003 until 2012.

Hitchings' daughter, Jennifer Mattingly, manages the business now and says she has no plans to sell the vineyard or merely sell fruit to other wineries.

Dick O'Brien (1940–2016)

Richard Lewis "Dick" O'Brien passed away at home Sept. 25, 2016, a month after a diagnosis of bile duct cancer.

Alongside Betty, his wife of 49 years, they planted the first five acres of Elton Vineyards in the Eola-Amity Hills in 1983 on land inherited from Betty's parents, Elton and Peggy Ingram. As the vines matured, the O'Briens became cherished members of the Willamette Valley wine community and their vineyard was well respected, leading to a long-term lease to Willamette Valley Vineyards upon the couple's retirement in 2007.

Dick was born Nov. 13, 1940, in Harpers Ferry, Iowa, to Mary May and Arlo O'Brien, and spent most of his youth in Alliance, Nebraska. He attended Oregon State University — he was an avid, lifelong Beaver fan, win or lose — and graduated from Oregon College of Education (now Western Oregon University). He served in the U.S. Army Medical Corps, including time in Vietnam.

For nearly 30 years, Dick taught middle school in Salem-Keizer — primarily at Parrish Middle School. In addition to his passion for education, he was an adventurous world traveler and history buff.

Dick, a lover and great supporter of art, volunteered as a carver for Salem's Riverfront Carousel Project. He served on the board of directors — including president — of the Salem Art Association and was a vital part of the Salem Art Fair & Festival. His dedication to art was reflected in his memorable, whimsical garden filled with flowers and art.

MARSHALL DAVIS OWNER COMPETES IN U.S. OPEN

BY OSSIE BLADINE

Last year, after a quarter-century of competitive golf, Marshall Davis Winery co-owner Matt Marshall had decided to take a break … that is until the 2016 U.S. Open.

Marshall qualified and competed in the 116th annual tournament June 16–19 at the storied Oakmont Country Club in Oakmont, Pennsylvania — where Jack Nicklaus won his first professional tournament by defeating Arnold Palmer in 1962 U.S. Open.

But before we get to Marshall's results, how did he get there? Time for a playback.

He qualified for the U.S. Open on June 6 by shooting a 6-under, 138, at the 36-hole sectional qualifying at Royal Oaks Country Club in Vancouver, Washington.

The 31-year-old needed three extra holes to complete the feat. He tied for the third and final qualifying spot after two rounds with 19-year-old Austin Connelly, who turned pro last year directly out of high school.

Marshall, who spent seven years after a successful college career playing The McKenzie Tour-PGA Canada Tour, said the age difference was very apparent to him.

"He definitely made me feel pretty old; but I think it was an advantage," Marshall said, "I've been in a lot of situations that prepared me for that."

Both players parred the first two playoff holes, and each hit their approach shots on the green of the third. But, Connelly's was "on a tough spot on the green." He blew his birdie putt about eight feet by the hole and couldn't make the comeback putt for par. Marshall lagged a five-foot birdie putt and tapped in to earn a spot in the 116th U.S. Open Championship.

"It's been a whirlwind," Marshall said prior to the tournament. "They don't give you a whole lot of time to plan for this.

Marshall moved to Carlton two years ago with his wife, Danielle, who caddied all 39 holes for him on June 6. He grew up in Wilsonville but moved around the West Coast, as his father, Bob, changed jobs in the golf course management business — Bob is currently the director of golf at CordeValle in San Martin, California, the site of this year's U.S. Women's Open.

He played collegiate golf for two years at UCLA and two years at UC Davis before turning pro. His two older brothers, Sean and Ryan, however, stayed in the Willamette Valley. Sean moved to Carlton in the mid-2000s to work in the wine industry, and the family followed. In 2011, the Marshall brothers founded Marshall Davis Wines, which has its tasting room inside The Horse Radish in Carlton, and soon after their parents purchased acreage nearby, where the winery's vineyard is now located.

Matt Marshall worked at the winery over the winter, as he contemplated his next step in life. In April, he was hired on as the assistant pro at Portland Golf Club, which allowed him to remain around the game he loves, but without the constant pressure of touring life. He also helped out with the Linfield golf team this spring.

"I decided I should keep my game

SCOTT WRIGHT CAPTURES BURGUNDY IN FILM

BY L.M. ARCHER

What would you do if you witnessed devastation in a place you love? For Oregon wine importer and impresario Scott Wright, the answer is simple: Make a movie.

"I was there [in Burgundy] last November, when just two days after the Paris attacks, Les Trois Glorieuses [Burgundy's annual end-of-harvest celebration] weekend went on as scheduled despite the horrific events," recalls Wright, "When it became apparent that the Burgundian spirit was truly indomitable, that nothing could suppress the passion and joie de vivre and dedication to tradition that is uniquely Burgundian. It was then that I knew we needed to document it all."

"The Burgundians and Champenois are a warm and welcoming breed of human beings, and I feel a strong connection with them." SCOTT WRIGHT

A former radio personality and recording executive, Wright moved to the Willamette Valley in 1999 with his wife, Martha, a writer and nonprofit PR maven, to join the wine industry and eventually launch Scott Paul Winery. Shortly thereafter, Domaine Drouhin Oregon approached Wright about assuming the role of directing manager, which he fulfilled from 2001 to 2004.

His regular travels to Burgundy on behalf of Domaine Drouhin Oregon brought him into contact with the winemaking community there, with whom he developed a deep affinity.

This affection fueled the fire for the Wrights to form Caveau Selections in 2005, importing small-producer Burgundy wines and grower Champagnes. Eventually, the couple sold their interest in Scott Paul Winery to business partner Cameron Healy, the Kettle Chips and Kona Brewing tycoon.

When not in Portland, Wright spends his days exploring Burgundy and Champagne, on the hunt for artisanal wine — "farmers, not factories."

"One of the best things about my life as an importer… no, make it THE best thing is the number of friendships I've developed with our producers over the years," Wright explained. "I've learned so much about life, wine, joy, friendship and family from an amazing group of people. The Burgundians and Champenois are a warm and welcoming breed of human beings, and I feel a strong connection with them."

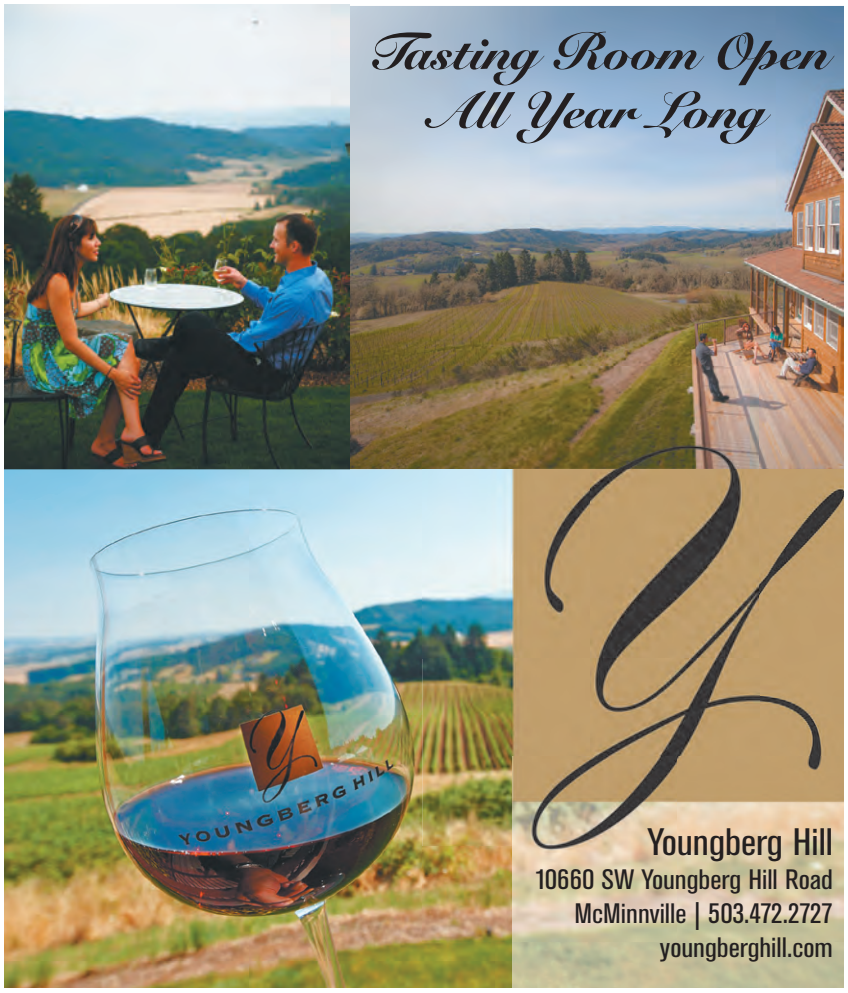

But the terrorist events of November 2015 changed something, spurring Wright to find a way to help his Burgundian brothers and sisters. Mother Nature intensified that call to action in April 2016 with a ruthless frost, followed by hail, then mildew. Some vineyards, including many of Wrights' own producers, lost more than 80 percent of their fruit.

Wright sought out writer/filmmaker David Baker to assist in capturing this riveting confluence of events in their groundbreaking movie, "Three Days of Glory (Les Trois Glorieuses)."

"For me, this is like everything else I've ever done: a project of pure passion," conceded Wright, "It seems like a natural extension of everything else I do or have done, namely, finding something I believe in passionately and

SOURCE RELEASES OREGON VINEYARD/WINERY CENSUS

BY OWP STAFF

As winery and vineyard crews continue this year's harvest, the Southern Oregon University Research Center (SOURCE) has been focused on the previous, having recently released its 2015 Oregon Vineyard and Winery Census Report in late August.

Predictably, Pinot Noir continues to lead all varieties at 62.2 percent of planted acreage (17,146 acres). Other top planted varieties include: Pinot Gris, 3,615 acres (12.8 percent); Chardonnay, 1,564 (5.5 percent); and Riesling, 724 acres (2.5 percent).

The number of vineyards increased by about 2 percent to 1,052. The North Willamette Valley contains the highest number of vineyards at 606; the second highest is Rogue Valley at 164. In terms of increasing vineyard land, Oregon added approximately 644 acres of vines in 2015, totaling 28,034 acres. From these vines, 84,949 tons of Oregon fruit were picked, marking a healthy increase of 7.8 percent over 2014.

Pinot Noir is still king in both North and South Willamette Valley with a combined total of 41,832 tons (67.7 percent) picked in 2015. In the Umpqua and Rogue valleys, Pinot Noir is also the most prolific with 5,936 and 2,267 tons, respectively, translating to a robust 67 percent for the Umpqua, yet only about 25 percent for the Rogue — an impressive list of other varieties, such as Pinot Gris (1,198 tons), Syrah (741), Riesling (670), Tempranillo (575), Merlot (582), Chardonnay (567), Viognier (503), Cabernet Sauvignon (465) and others make up the majority of Oregon's southernmost AVA's production. In the Columbia Gorge, Pinot Gris — not Noir — is the winner with 1,283 tons (24.7 percent), followed by Cabernet Sauvignon at 938 tons (18.0 percent) and then Pinot Noir with 702 tons (13.5 percent).

On the sales side of the report, SOURCE categorized successes by channel. In 2015, tasting rooms sold 421,178 cases (up 8.3 percent); wine clubs, 232,045 (up 19.6 percent); web and phone orders, 81,568 (up 10.5 percent) and wholesale (Oregon, national, international and private label sales) amounted to 2,358,869 cases (up 7.2 percent). In all, 3,093,660 cases equaling $470,650,919 (up 8.5 percent, or about $40.2 million) were sold. Globally, Canada continues to be Oregon's largest export market with 31,015 cases, accounting for 44.2 percent of international sales.

Breaking into China

EXPORTER/IMPORTER STARTS SMALL IN BIG MARKET

BY VIKI EIERDAM

The people of China have a powerful appetite for fine wine, and after the rise and fall of Bordeauxs — recounted in the documentary "Red Obsession" — their focus appears to have widened to a more global perspective.

With so many beautiful expressions of wine to choose from in the Northwest, this area is prime for quenching a bit of Asia's growing thirst. Unfortunately, not all export companies are created equally and some have gone so far as to taint the excitement of, at least, a handful of winemakers' dreams.

Enter Royal Comfort Distributors, a Portland-based, locally owned company whose secret weapon is the unfailing drive of its president, Mei Wong, and vice-president, Trish Nolan. Along with other seasoned partners, they're successfully exporting Northwest wines as no other company has done thus far.

With Nolan's background in international business development, Mei's firsthand knowledge of the language and culture, and the importance they place on being transparent with each client, they favor quality before quantity, and the people of China — as well as local winemakers — are responding in kind.

Royal Comfort began in February 2015, immediately forging relationships throughout Oregon and Washington. From top producers to boutique vineyards, they're not specifically intending to represent big numbers.

"We want each winery to have enough [production], first and foremost, for the local market and enough to offer to the Chinese market. We can court smaller wineries on a case-by-case basis," Mei said.

The culmination of their preparation and research was the China International Wine & Spirits Exhibition (Interwine), a tradeshow held twice a year since 2005 that attracts 32,000 visitors. On November 10, 2015, Nolan and Mei descended on the autumn exhibition accompanied by their C.O.O, Mark Wong, and some winery support: Steve Anderson, winemaker for Eola Hills Winery; Carol Girard, owner of Benton-Lane Winery; and Kylie Huggins-Shaeffer, also of Eola Hills, made the substantial trek to introduce, educate and sell Northwest wine to the largely untapped market — Harper Voit, the third winery in Royal Comfort's portfolio, was unable to attend.

> "They know Burgundy, but they don't know Pinot Noir."

What they found was an audience eager to learn. Holding the first wine class of the 2015 conference, Royal Comfort spoke to a standing-room-only crowd — those turned away visited the company's booth later in the morning.

"They know Burgundy, but they don't know Pinot Noir," Mei said. "People were so interested and excited. They were thrilled with the quality of wines we brought. They came to our booth and brought friends to taste the wines."

Taking advantage of as much potential promotion at an event attended by importers, restaurateurs, hoteliers and corporate event organizers, Benton-Lane

Dauntless and Determined

Iraq war veterans Ryan Mills, Paul Warmbier and Ben Martin create wine with a mission

STORY BY VIKI EIERDAM

More than any other sector, veterans struggle with homelessness and unemployment. Even those returning with few physical injuries must deal with significant mental and emotional scars. One group of men in the Willamette Valley has taken their personal stories and launched a wine company aimed at tackling these tough issues, restoring dignity to wounded soldiers in the process.

Dauntless Wine Cømpany was founded in 2014 by Marine veterans Ryan Mills, Ben Martin and Paul Warmbier; each served at least one deployment in Iraq.

From the battlefield to their communities back home, they continue to apply their unique skills in helping others. For example, Mills and Warmbier worked for Team Rubicon, an organization that joins the skills and experiences of military veterans with first responders to rapidly deploy emergency rescue teams.

After years of working with other nonprofit organizations helping veterans, the three decided to try a different approach, drawing inspiration from the French Foreign Legion. Evidence dating to Roman times suggests that land was granted to returning soldiers, which many planted in vines. More recently, the Institution des Invalides de la Legion Etrangère was created in 1953 in the shadow of the Sainte Victoire Mountain in the south of France. It is a château where retired legionnaires can live out their days and tend to The Legion vineyards.

This concept resonated with Martin.

"Studies have shown that tactile therapy — being able to work with your hands and be in a comfortable environment — is good for traumatic brain injuries (TBI) and PTSD. Combat veterans, for their whole enlistment, are trying to destroy with extreme prejudice. We're introducing the flip side; creating something is the idea behind it," Martin explained.

Still in its infancy, Dauntless currently crafts wines out of the ADEA winemaker studio in Gaston.

Their labels tell the story. No Man's Land Chehalem Mountains Pinot Noir, comprised of all Wädenswil, depicts the wasteland that claimed many of the 20 million lives lost during World War I.

"We remember this war and horror so as to honor those who gave their lives in the trenches," Warmbier added.

The wine itself, gently pressed, unfiltered and minimally fined, was aged in French oak, on the lees and stirred to provide a full flavor profile.

Dauntless' most popular wine, Howitzer Willamette Valley Pinot Noir, pays homage to the artillery piece dating to the 1420s — American oak lends it a more robust character.

Offering a crisp balance of fruit and floral notes, Trenton Willamette Valley Pinot Gris depicts a scene honoring the Battle of Trenton, the historically significant conflict waged on a frigid morning in December 1776.

"The thing with veterans is they want to be around like-minded individuals. They need space to do meaningful work and a creative space to feel safe and not judged by society."

BEN MARTIN, DAUNTLESS WINE CØMPANY

The fourth and final wine, Dauntless' barrel-select Pinot Noir Reserve, is a sage offering with the complexity of experience and elegance of perseverance; the label's rifle stack represents the three men coming together to create the winery.

Current case production for 2015 sits at only 300 — still in barrel, 2016 production is estimated at 800 to 900 — but the partners have a vision that's gaining momentum. Their objective is to purchase a vineyard and support a totally veteran staff. They even envision long-term housing options for returning soldiers with rehabilitation opportunities.

"The thing with veterans is they want to be around like-minded individuals," said Martin. "They need space to do meaningful work and a creative space to feel safe and not judged by society. Granted, right now, we can't hire all the veterans we want to, but the ones we're able to hire have been so grateful. Our goal is to offer them a safe place, and I don't think a lot of veterans think of agriculture as an opportunity."

The outpouring of support has spurred on Dauntless. From Dean Fisher at ADEA to Jesse Estate Vineyards and Sass Winery, the industry has shown support in ways Martin never would've imagined. He went on to say that Gary Mortenson of Stoller Family Estate was instrumental in helping Dauntless refine their brand before they even had a label.

Registered with Homegrown by Heroes — the branding arm of the Farmer Veteran Coalition (FVC) — Dauntless received a $5,000 grant from the FVC, instrumental in paying for bottles and labels for their 2015 vintage. They've made a voluntary decision to repay that kindness to ensure that the FVC is available for other veterans.

Future profits will support local veteran charities. NW Battle Buddies, located in Battle Ground, Washington, has been discussed. The organization trains and donates service dogs to veterans suffering from PTSD. "We love what they do for veterans on the person-to-person level," said Warmbier .

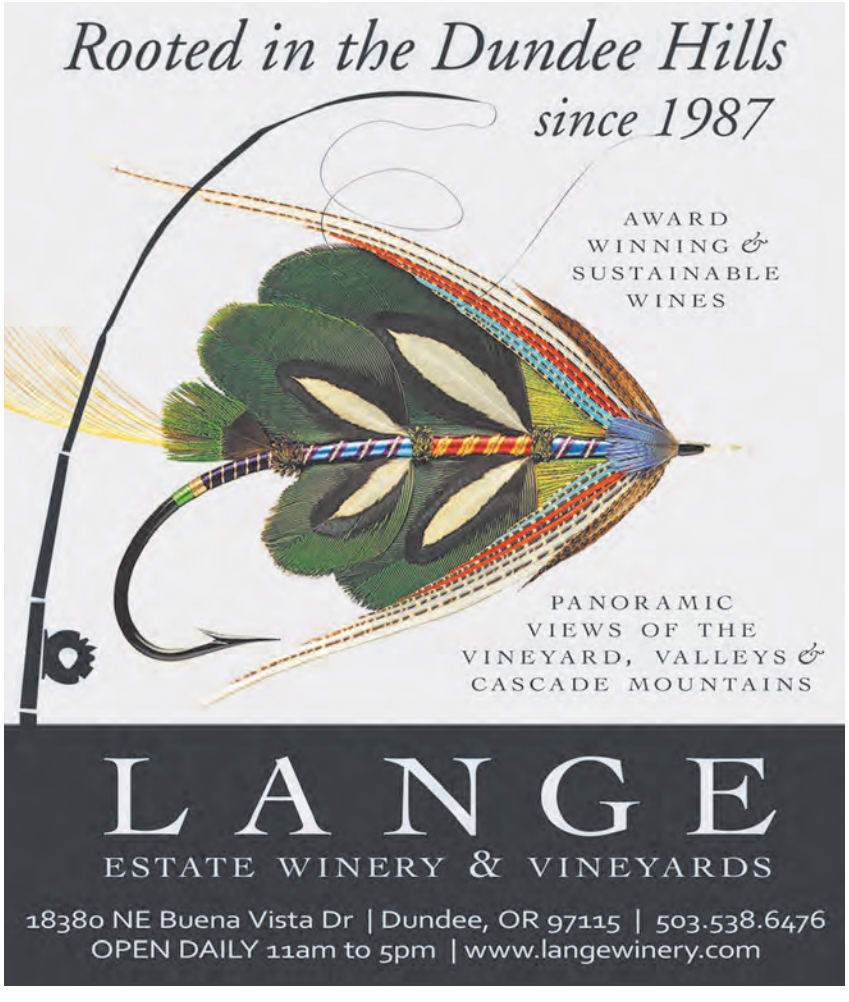

When Dauntless case production grows, they'd like to earmark each individual offering for a different charity and give back even more on a national level.

Dauntless also wants to be a clearing house, of sorts, for vineyards seeking veteran help, veterans hoping to start their own vineyards and everything in between in the Willamette Valley area. They're already fielding local calls as well as inquiries from California. Their driving force is to help veterans and they recognize agriculture as the synergistic platform for their cause.

"We need farmers. Veterans need meaningful work," Martin said. "They (military veterans) have attention to detail. They know hard work. They're accustomed to long days. They don't shirk responsibilities. It's just a perfect fit, I think."

Did you know?

In ancient Greece, a dinner host would take the first sip of wine to assure guests the wine was not poisoned, hence the phrase "drinking to one's health." "Toasting" started in ancient Rome when the Romans started dropping a piece of toasted bread into each wine glass to temper undesirable tastes or excessive acidity.

Did you know?

Chinese pottery vessels dating 7000 B.C. suggest evidence of mead fermentation that out-ages both wine and beer. The very first batch of mead was probably a chance discovery. Early foragers likely drank the contents of a rainwater-flooded beehive that had fermented naturally with the help of airborne yeast.

2017 Oregon Wine A-List Awards

BY OREGON WINE PRESS AND OREGON WINE BOARD

BY HILARY BERG

From small cafés to trending hot spots to celebrated institutions, restaurants continue to enhance their cellars with Oregon wine. High-quality beverage programs here are championing our industry just as other world-class regions — Napa, Burgundy, etc. — support their own. In addition, restaurants beyond our borders have also impressed us with menus illustrating a sincere appreciation of Oregon wine.

To the sommeliers, stewards, owners, chefs and general managers who are committed to Oregon, we honor you with this year's Oregon Wine A-List Awards. Presented by the Oregon Wine Press and Oregon Wine Board, the program celebrates restaurants displaying enthusiasm for our state's wine and a deep appreciation of the diverse regions, varietals and producers.

Congratulations to the following restaurants (marked with an A-List icon on the following pages) that have earned a spot on the 2017 Oregon Wine A-List. A special thank-you to those winning Wine Program of the Year and Regional Spotlight Awards (as listed below). These restaurants really set the bar in their approach to promoting Oregon wine. Look for a special feature about these winning restaurants in the February 2017 issue of OWP.

Notice an Oregon wine-loving restaurant has been omitted from the A-List? Please be sure to nominate it next year on www.oregonwine.org/a-list. If your regular restaurant is not on the list for its possible lack of home-grown wines, we encourage you to engage the management in an educational discussion of Oregon wine and its world-class status.

Did you know?

The most revered wines generally come from the poorest soils. While fertile soil might be great for veggies and grazing, wine-grapes thrive in poor soils causing the vines to work harder and dig deeper to get needed nutrients. As a result, the vines yield less fruit, often smaller berries, but with more flavor.

Contrary to traditional belief, smelling the cork reveals little about the wine. Instead, look for mold, drying, cracking or breaks in the cork.

TERROIR CONGRESS

Juice and Wine Chemistry."

From her presentation: "The hypothesis is that the physical and chemical differences in the soil can be compared to the grape juice and wine chemistry to determine the contribution of soil to the terroir of this region. Using Pinot Noir, a natural laboratory exists in the Willamette Valley, one where if winemaking techniques are kept constant when comparing soil, grape juice and wine from each winery, then the main variation between the wines is the soil type on which the grapes are grown (Burns 2012). In general, winemakers determined that the tannin, fruit flavors and mouthfeel were so different between soil types that a cause for these differences was desired..."

Burns reinforced soil's grand effect on Oregon wine with a quote from winemaker Ken Wright: "To understand Oregon is to understand geology."

In addition to soil and geology, presentations included: climates of wine regions worldwide; plant management across different terroirs; terroir zoning techniques; landscape/environmental sustainability and biodiversity; understanding and managing wine production from different terroirs; and the social constructs of terroir: tourism, economics and cultural ideals.

Thanks to the determination of climatologist Greg Jones of Southern Oregon University, the event was hosted in Oregon. His diligence led to a successful congress welcoming the world's wine elite in our own backyard. The camaraderie witnessed among the attendees and the exposure of Oregon wine was a bonus for local organizers, including Jones, who continues to show great dedication to his own research and the advancement in winegrowing.

"If part of the result of my work is that the region grows, gains recognition as a fine wine-producing region and people are successful, then I have succeeded in being a scientist," he said.

In addition to the presentation of papers, participants experienced some of Oregon's own terroir at site visits and dinners hosted by the Dundee Hills, McMinnville and Chehalem Mountains AVAs. A gala dinner in Linfield's Oak Grove concluded the congress until next year.

Burgundian winegrower Jean-Yves Bizot of Vosne-Romanée once wrote, "At last, and maybe above all, terroir is a state of mind, a humbler attitude in front of nature."

For this writer, having witnessed this once-in-a-lifetime event, I have a much greater respect for terroir and its many, many implications.

Conclusion? Wine is definitely made in the vineyard.

¡SALUD!

harvesting Pommard at the top of a hill on a bright, sunny afternoon. Vineyard Manager Luke McCollum said the service has made a major difference with his seasonal crew. His vineyard acts as a hub when ¡Salud! visits, bringing workers from several surrounding vineyards to take part.

"When we started with ¡Salud!, it was like a lot of them had never even had their teeth cleaned before," he said. "When they see the truck arrive, they all line up to be seen."

Returning to the ¡Salud! office in Hillsboro, the bilingual four-person team — two registered nurses, a health educator and a program assistant — is gearing up for vaccinations at King Estate. They recently returned from another one, and before the year is out, they will have completed four. During such trips, they'll vaccinate an average of 30 people daily but have seen up to 100.

"It might be muddy," remarks Community Outreach Nurse Carrie Body before we walk outside to take a look at Lady Bug.

It wasn't terribly muddy, but the van carries a reminder of the early days for Tuality Healthcare. A collapsible partition, which Garside speculates is from the 1940s, is standard issue in the van. Used for added privacy, the team calls it the "Minnie Jones Curtain," which is a nod to the founder of Tuality, a nurse who would make house calls to deliver babies — starting in 1918 — traveling with a similar curtain.

To be sure, the team at ¡Salud! encompasses the same community health spirit. Body has a rich history in community health, having worked for others in the Portland area before joining ¡Salud! just two and a half years ago. The team's education coordinator studied public health at Portland State University, and has been with ¡Salud! since graduating six years previously. Miriam Lopez, the team's services assistant, brings a solid interest in community health outreach, as well.

At the main office, Foundation Manager Maria McCandless, alongside Communications and Special Events Officer Lindsay Coon, ensures fundraising efforts for ¡Salud! never cease. A cabinet in McCandless' office displays past ¡Salud! awards, and a pencil drawing of a proud vineyard worker hangs on her wall. It's the work of Ginny Adelsheim of Adelsheim Vineyards.

McCandless says making sure ¡Salud! is funded is a year-round effort. Through the auction, a summertime dinner and contributions from companies and individuals, ¡Salud! is funded solely by donations and made possible by hard work.

"We would not be able to be successful without the many hours of volunteer leadership from the wine industry principals who work year-round, side-by-side with us to execute the auction and raise funds for this project," McCandless said. "Over the past 25 years, the players may change, but the consistency of this leadership has remained strong."

As ¡Salud! enters its 26th year, what is clear is how it has become a part of the seasonal worker community. Emblazoned on the side of the van is the official ¡Salud! logo: a partial silhouette of a worker, kneeling as he pulls a cluster from a vine. The image, said Garside, brought a heartwarming response from a four-year-old boy the first time the team had the new van out in the field.

"He looked up at the truck, saw the logo and said, 'Look, it's my dad on the truck!' And it was just so sweet."

2016 ¡Salud! The Oregon Pinot Noir Auction

BY TAMARA BELGARD

Each year, Oregon wineries craft their best barrels of wine to donate to the ¡Salud! Program Barrel Auction. This milestone year, 43 wineries generously contributed to the cause. On Friday, Nov. 11, 2016, the Cuveé Tasting and Big Barrel Auction took place at Ponzi Vineyards, raising more than $173,000 — through robust partnerships in the medical community, every $1 is more equivalent to $3.

"We have a number of Hispanic people on our staff that are very much invested in the ¡Salud! Program, so they care about this wine in particular," says winemaker Luisa Ponzi of Ponzi Vineyards. "We invite them to participate in the blending process, and not only do they help us come up with the ¡Salud! blend we're pouring here today, they bottle and label this wine lovingly by hand."

Saturday, Nov. 12, guests gathered at the Sentinel Hotel where they tasted wines from the Vintners Circle, enjoyed sparkling wine from an ice luge artfully sculpted to honor the silver anniversary, and bid on the silent and live auction packages. An array of tempting packages ranged from extensive collections of current and library wines, to private winemaker dinners, wine country helicopter tours, vineyard hikes, overnight stays in winery guesthouses, exotic trips to New Zealand, France and the Rogue Valley, a TED Talks package, wine club memberships, framed art and more.

The live auction and gala, which began with a poignant performance by Storm Large singing "America the Beautiful," netted $737,000, for a grand total of $911,300 — a bit shy of the $1.2 million goal. The highlight of the live auction, and maybe it was more like the Grand Finalé at a fireworks show, was when Ronni Lacroute, philanthropist and former owner of Willakenzie Estate, offered a booming $100,000 donation hoping someone would match her. Though the generous offer was not matched in one lump sum, it did trigger a gigantic wave of cash donations.

The ¡Salud! program teaches us many valuable lessons about hardworking individuals who don't have access to basic health care, about giving back and how wine can bring us all together. The next time you raise your glass, remember the migrant and seasonal farm workers who helped provide the wine you're toasting with, convey cheers to them and consider how you can help.

For more information on how to contribute to the ¡Salud! program, visit www.saludauction.org.

JFW ACQUISITIONS

Blanc clones from Alsace, Gamay Noir clones from Beaujolais, as well as Pinot Meunier and Dijon clones of Chardonnay.

Along with the brand, winemaking facility and hospitality center, the acquisition also includes 100 planted acres on the Yamhill-Carlton estate and 25 of Pinot Noir at the Jory Hills Vineyard in the Dundee Hills.

Ronni Lacroute is convinced Willakenzie's high quality will continue.

"I'm confident that Jackson Family Wines will respect our brand and philosophy with their strong values of people first, sustainability, respect for the environment and innovation."

New Construction, McMinnville

Less than a week before the Willakenzie purchase, Jackson Family Wines announced plans to construct a modern winemaking facility for its mounting production of Willamette Valley Pinot Noir, Chardonnay and Pinot Gris; it will be located in McMinnville on the same property as the former Evergreen Aviation office buildings, two of which were acquired in January.

The new structure will incorporate sustainable technology, housing a small-lot winery and barrel room; construction began in August, and the winery is expected to be operational for the 2017 harvest season.

"Building our own facility enables us to create a contemporary environment for crafting luxury wines," said Reimers. "We're proud to be a part of the McMinnville community, bringing additional employment to the area and joining in the overall revitalization and enhancement of this part of the city."

One of the existing office buildings will be renovated into a sophisticated laboratory and offices for the winemaking and production teams. No plans have been mentioned for the other building.

MATT MARSHALL

fresh, if I could," he said, which led to the decision to play in the U.S. Open qualifier.

He finished tied for fourth at the local qualifying round, with an even-par 72 at Pronghorn Resort (Nicklaus Course) on May 10 — good enough to advance to the sectional round.

Marshall started well at Royal Oaks with two birdies and an eagle on his first nine. He finished his opening round birdie-birdie for a 5-under 67. Conditions were more difficult in the afternoon as the wind increased. Starting on the back nine, he bogeyed 14, 16 and 17 to drop to 3-under-par, but finished strong by birdying three of his last 10 holes, without a bogey.

Midway through his back nine, a live scoreboard showed he was one shot back of the third and final qualifying position. "I told myself, 'We have to play solid on these last holes.'" He nearly birdied his last hole, which would have given him a tie for second, but just missed and settled for par. But that proved to not matter in the end.

Marshall's exceptional play has something to do with his new path, he thinks. A steady paycheck has given him some security and allowed him to play golf free of expectations.

"When you're playing week-to-week to pay the bills, there's lots of added pressure there," he said. "That's what I've been focusing on lately, is just enjoying the days and teeing it up and going out and doing what I know to do.

"Life tends to throw you a lot of curve balls," he added. "This is definitely a good one."

So how did he do?

Marshall earned himself 36 more holes of tournament golf at Oakmont by firing a 5-over 145 in his first two rounds of the U.S. Open.

Marshall's first round didn't start until Friday, June 17, because weather suspended play on Thursday. He shot a 2-over 72 on his opening 18 holes, then quickly returned to the course for round two and played until darkness halted play on his 32nd hole of the day.

"It was a grind toward the end," Marshall said. "Thirty-two holes on any day is tough, but on this golf course, in the U.S. Open … when the horn was blown for darkness, I was happy to leave."

Marshall was 5-over, right along the cut line, when he teed off on Saturday. "It was nice to come out a little refreshed." He held his position in the field by parring holes 15 through 18 for a second round 75.

In a field of nearly 155 golfers, the top 60 and ties after round two make the cut. Marshall tied for 45th heading into round three at Oakmont.

He followed a difficult front nine with a strong finish on Sunday, June 19, ending his storybook appearance at the U.S. Open in a tie for 61st place.

His three birdies in the last 10 holes gave him a 76 in the final round, after a 75 in Round 3 on Saturday. Marshall and Tim Wilkinson each won $23,938 for finishing at 296, 16 over par. Winner Dustin Johnson, winner by three strokes at 4 under par, took home $1.8 million for his first major golf title.

SCOTT WRIGHT

Financed largely by crowd-sourced funding, private investors and grants from the French government, Wright anticipates a release date in late November 2017, coinciding with post-harvest celebrations. This film marks the second collaboration for both men. The first, Baker's 2014 movie "American Wine Story," recounted the stories of "oenological aficionados," Wright among them, who quit other careers to reinvent themselves in the wine industry.

"Previous films have seemed more like public television specials," Wright explained. "We want to make something more cinematic, a 'movie,' and to make a film that captures the Burgundy only insiders ever get to see. I don't think we've seen this on the screen yet."

Wright shared his insights after recently returning from the 2016 harvest in Burgundy, one of low yields and high quality. He expects a full financial reckoning will emerge in 2018, upon release of the meager 2016 vintage.

"Burgundy expected nothing," Wright said, "And got slightly more than nothing. We are perhaps at a turning point in the region. It interesting to note that over the past seven years, despite the lower quantity, the quality is high. Maybe this is the new reality."

In the meantime, vignerons like Thiébault Huber of Domaine Huber-Verdereau in Volnay try focusing on next year; his Pommard Clos du Colombier yielded only two barrels in 2016, down from a normal 12 in previous harvests.

Wright added, "He is the first person to work in the morning and the last one to leave at night; he works harder and plays harder than anyone I've ever known."

Overall concern extends to other producers, too, like Alexandrine Roy of Domaine Marc Roy in Gevrey-Chambertin, one of the younger generation of winemakers caught up the "new reality." In 2003, Alexandrine assumed authority of the estate, now totaling just under 10 acres, from her father, Marc Roy, whose own grandfather established the property with merely a few parcels of vines. Considered one of Burgundy's brightest rising stars, Alexandrine visits Oregon frequently to promote her wines and to make wine for Phelps Creek Vineyard in the Columbia Gorge.

"They [the younger generation] don't want to be the ones who lose it all," admitted Wright, "Yet some are being caught in a perfect storm of seven consecutive difficult harvests. Some own, but some lease, with lease payments tied to the prices of the wine. So people are now paying more to farm the land, but posting nothing.

"There is great worry that the younger generation of vignerons, who have taken control of family estates in the last few years and have never known a commercially successful year during their reign, are likely to soon be selling the family jewels and moving on to other ways of making a living."

While Alexandrine Roy may represent Burgundy's future, and Thiébault Huber its heart, Thierry Violot-Guillemard of Pommard surely symbolizes its soul.

"A true character in every sense of the word, and one of my favorite people on the planet, Thierry Violot-Guillemard is definitely one of a kind," Wright said. "He's a bit gruff and burly on the outside, with a warm and genuine tenderness within, much like his home village of Pommard."

Walrus-mustached Violot-Guillemard reflects the essence of this region Wright loves so much. "Most of these vineyards in Burgundy are tiny operations," Wright explained, "mom-and-pop operations, small family domaines. There's a great story to tell here, and most people don't really get to see it. This unique spirit and culture that makes it [Burgundy] so special.

"Their resiliency is impressive if not flat-out amazing," marvels Wright, "I wanted to make this film because I was inspired by several recent wine-focused documentaries that I felt failed to capture the spirit, culture and personality of the Burgundy that I've come to know and love."

Perhaps the most amazing story to emerge from vintage 2016 involves the distinguished Grand Cru vineyards of Montrachet.

"Six of the very top producers had so little fruit in their parcels that they could not even make a commercial quantity of wine this year," Wright explained. "Superstars Domaine de la Romanée-Conti, Domaine Leflaive and Domaine Comtes Lafon have teamed up with Domaine Amiot [Guy et Fils], [Domaine] Lamy Pillot and [Domaine] Fleurot[-Larose] to pool all of their Montrachet grapes together, giving them enough to produce a total of two barrels (about six hundred bottles) of 2016 Montrachet. The wine will never be released for sale. Each producer involved will have a few cases for their own cellars, potentially to share with top customers and friends over the years, but it will never be on the market. I imagine, at some point, a few bottles will end up at auctions — it could be one of the most sought-after bottlings ever!'

As Wright and Baker return to Burgundy to film the post-harvest Les Trois Glorieuses celebration, Wright anticipates three days unlike any he's witnessed to date.

"I just hope that people who love food and wine get to see this film," Wright concluded. "Hopefully it can be enjoyed on many different levels. Ultimately, I just hope to give people a glimpse of the real Burgundy, one of the world's great treasures. Every bottle of wine tells a story, and we'll be capturing the stories of some of the world's most legendary wines."

OREGON TO CHINA

sponsored a sommelier challenge offered to students who'd completed their studies and were earning certifications that day — each participant received a bottle the winery's estate Pinot Noir. Benton-Lane is now the sole American winery promoted in more than 40 Chinese cities throughout 2016 as part of a "road show" program.

To help tell the wineries' stories, Royal Comfort organized a winemakers' dinner for local media, writers and bloggers wherein Benton-Lane, Eola Hills and Harper Voit wines were paired with an extensive six-course meal. Mei emphasized the producers' dedication to sustainable farming which is highly regarded by the Chinese population.

After translating all the wine labels, racking up air miles, clearing customs and holding firm to a standard of unwavering integrity for their clients and a wine region they are all genuinely passionate about, how'd they do? One month after returning from Guangzhou, Royal Comfort received its first order. One pallet — 56 cases — consisting of a combination of all three wineries was shipped to a single customer who owns a technology company in China.

With the success of their first trade show and contacts made during their visit, Royal Comfort has already laid the foundation for Interwine 2016. A booth that is quadruple the size of their 2015 space has been negotiated; it will be located at the entrance to the exhibition hall. There'll be three separate pouring stations each staffed with its own interpreter. An education class will be sponsored and a second one is being considered.

Southern Oregon's Abacela and South Willamette's Iris Vineyards have been added to the roster, and they're in talks with a handful of others. To be able to offer personalized service and attention to each client, representation will be limited to 10 wineries.

Aside from being an exporter of Northwest wines, there was an initial goal to be an importer, as well. A couple private tastings have produced positive feedback for Chateau Rongzi — a Chinese winery with vintages overseen by Jean-Claude Berrouet of Petrous fame — and Italian varietals crafted by Terre dei Castellaz. Soon these wines will be available for purchase through Royal Comfort.

Looking ahead, the group wants to establish distribution routes throughout China and add a former Oregonian to their China-based distribution team.

"We want to build a good relationship with the Chinese people, help support their marketing and bring wines over here for marketing," Mei said. "Our goal, really, is to have fun and share good wine from all over the world."
